Summary

Among the provisions that are intended to strengthen the nation's health care safety net and improve access to care, the ACA permanently reauthorized the federal health centers program and the National Health Service Corps (NHSC). The NHSC provides scholarships and student loan repayments to individuals who agree to a period of service as a primary care provider in a federally designated Health Professional Shortage Area. In addition, the ACA addressed concerns about the current size, specialty mix, and geographic distribution of the health care workforce. It reauthorized and expanded existing health workforce education and training programs under Titles VII and VIII of the Public Health Service Act (PHSA). Title VII supports the education and training of physicians, dentists, physician assistants, and public health workers through grants, scholarships, and loan repayment. The ACA created several new programs to increase training experiences in primary care, in rural areas, and in community-based settings, and provided training opportunities to increase the supply of pediatric subspecialists and geriatricians. It also expanded the nursing workforce development programs authorized under PHSA Title VIII.

As part of a comprehensive framework for federal community-based public health activities, including a national strategy and a national education and outreach campaign, the ACA authorized several new grant programs with a focus on preventable or modifiable risk factors for disease (e.g., sedentary lifestyle, tobacco use). The new law also leveraged a number of mechanisms to improve health care quality, including new requirements for quality measure development, collection, analysis, and public reporting; programs to develop and disseminate innovative strategies for improving the quality of health care delivery; and support for care coordination programs such as medical homes and the co-location of primary health care and mental health services. Additionally, the ACA authorized funding for programs to prevent elder abuse, neglect, and exploitation; grants to expand trauma care services and improve regional coordination of emergency services; and demonstration projects to implement alternatives to current tort litigation for resolving medical malpractice claims, among other provisions.

The Congressional Budget Office estimated that the ACA's discretionary spending provisions, if fully funded by appropriations acts, would result in appropriations of approximately $100 billion over the 10-year period FY2012-FY2021. Much of that funding would be for discretionary programs that existed prior to, and whose funding was reauthorized by, the ACA. While most of those existing discretionary programs continue to receive an annual discretionary appropriation, albeit at levels below the amounts authorized by the law, few of the new grant programs authorized under the ACA have received any discretionary funding. However, several of the new programs have received mandatory funds from the ACA. This report is periodically revised and updated to reflect important legislative and other developments.

Introduction

Implementation of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (ACA),¹ the health reform law enacted in March 2010, is having a significant impact on federal mandatory—also known as direct—spending.² The ACA provided subsidies to help offset the cost of purchasing private insurance coverage through health insurance exchanges established under the law and included enhanced federal funding to expand state Medicaid programs. The law also included numerous mandatory appropriations to fund temporary programs that increase access to health care for targeted groups, provide funding to states to plan and establish health insurance exchanges, and support many other research and demonstration programs.³

In addition, the ACA is having an impact on federal discretionary spending, which is subject to the annual appropriations process.⁴ The law included many discretionary spending provisions that authorize the appropriation of funds to support new and existing grant programs and other activities. Moreover, the two federal agencies that are primarily responsible for the ACA's implementation—the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services (CMS) within the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS), and the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) within the Department of the Treasury—are incurring substantial costs to administer and enforce the law. Both agencies have requested additional discretionary funding in recent budget cycles to cover those costs.

This report focuses on the ACA's effects on discretionary spending. The information is summarized in a series of spending tables. The report begins with a discussion of the types of discretionary spending provisions in the ACA, and an explanation of the format and content of the tables. It also discusses recent actions taken by Congress and the President to reduce the federal deficit, including enactment of the Budget Control Act of 2011 (and its subsequent amendments). The impact of these actions on nondefense discretionary spending is briefly summarized.

This report is periodically revised and updated to reflect important legislative and administrative developments.

¹ The ACA was signed into law on March 23, 2010 (P.L. 111-148, 124 Stat. 119). A week later, on March 30, 2010, the President signed the Health Care and Education Reconciliation Act (HCERA; P.L. 111-152, 124 Stat. 1029), which amended numerous health care and revenue provisions in the ACA and added multiple new stand-alone provisions. Congress and the President have since enacted several other bills that have made more targeted changes to specific ACA provisions. All references to the ACA in this report refer collectively to the ACA, as amended, and to other related provisions in HCERA.

² Mandatory, or direct, spending generally refers to outlays from budget authority (i.e., the authority to incur financial obligations that result in government expenditures such as paying salaries, purchasing services, or awarding grants) that is provided in authorizing laws, as opposed to annual appropriations acts. Mandatory spending includes spending on entitlement programs (e.g., Medicare, Social Security).

⁴ Discretionary spending refers to outlays from budget authority that is provided in and controlled by annual appropriations acts. It typically covers the routine costs of running federal agencies, including wages and salaries.

Discretionary Spending Under the ACA

Discretionary spending under the ACA falls into one of two broad categories. First, there are the amounts provided in appropriations acts for specific grant and other programs pursuant to explicit authorizations of appropriations in the ACA. Second, there are the costs incurred by federal agencies to administer and enforce the health insurance reforms and other core requirements of the law.

Authorizations of Appropriations for Grant Programs

The ACA authorized numerous new discretionary grant programs and provided for each an authorization of appropriations, generally through FY2014 or FY2015. Many of these provisions authorize annual appropriations of specified amounts for one or more fiscal years to carry out the program. Other provisions authorize the appropriation of specified amounts for FY2010 or FY2011, and unspecified amounts—such sums as may be necessary, or SSAN—for later years. A few provisions authorize multi-year appropriations, available for obligation for a period in excess of one fiscal year (e.g., for the period FY2011 through FY2014). Numerous other provisions simply authorize the appropriation of SSAN, in a few cases without specifying any fiscal years.

In addition, the ACA reauthorized funding—in most instances through FY2014 or FY2015—for many existing discretionary grant programs, primarily ones authorized under the Public Health Service Act (PHSA). They include most, but not all, of the federal health workforce programs administered by Health Resources and Services Administration (HRSA). Funding authorizations for many of these established programs had expired prior to their reauthorization by the ACA. However, the programs continued to receive an annual appropriation. Importantly, the ACA permanently reauthorized appropriations for the federal health centers program, the National Health Service Corp (NHSC), and many programs and services provided by the Indian Health Service (IHS).⁵

The actual funding levels for the discretionary grant programs authorized (or reauthorized) by the ACA depend on decisions made by the congressional appropriators. That process may lead to greater or smaller amounts than the sums authorized by the law. With Congress operating under enforceable discretionary spending limits (see discussion below under “Recent Actions to Reduce Discretionary Spending”), it can be a challenge to maintain funding levels for longstanding programs with an established appropriations history, let alone secure initial funding to implement new programs.

All the ACA’s discretionary spending provisions that include authorizations of appropriations are summarized in a series of tables below. The provisions are organized by general topic under the following headings: Health Centers and Clinics (Table 2); Health Care Workforce (Table 3); Prevention and Wellness (Table 4); Maternal and Child Health (Table 5); Health Care Quality (Table 6); Nursing Homes (Table 7); Health Disparities Data Collection (Table 8); Emergency Care (Table 9); Elder Justice (Table 10); Biomedical Research (Table 11); Biologics (Table 12); 340B Drug Pricing (Table 13); Medical Malpractice (Table 14); Pain Care Management (Table 15); Medicaid (Table 16); Medicare (Table 17); and Private Health Insurance (Table 18).

⁵ ACA reauthorized the Indian Health Care Improvement Act (IHCIA), which includes many discretionary Indian Health Service (IHS) programs and services, and it extended indefinitely the authorizations of appropriations for these programs and services. For more information on ACA’s Indian health provisions, which are not included in this report, see CRS Report R41630, The Indian Health Care Improvement Act Reauthorization and Extension as Enacted by the ACA: Detailed Summary and Timeline, by Elayne J. Heisler.

Each table row provides information on a specific ACA provision, organized across four columns. The first column shows the ACA section or subsection number. The second column indicates whether the provision is freestanding (i.e., new statutory authority that is not amending an existing statute) or amendatory (i.e., amends an existing statute such as the PHSA, either by adding a new program or modifying an existing one). The name of the administering agency or office within HHS is also included, if known. The third column provides a brief description of the program, including the types of entities and/or individuals eligible for funding,⁶ and gives details of the authorization of appropriations.

Finally, the fourth column shows the program’s actual funding levels for FY2010 through FY2014 if it received any discretionary appropriations (or other funding) during that period. The FY2015 funding request, if applicable, is also provided.⁷ Funding from sources other than annual discretionary appropriations (e.g., ACA mandatory funds) is shown in parentheses. All the discretionary funding listed in the tables in this report is provided by the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, Education, and Related Agencies (L-HHS-ED) annual appropriations act. If CRS was unable to identify specific appropriations for a program, then that is indicated by the phrase “No appropriations identified.” In some instances a program may be supported with funds from another budget account.

In each of the larger tables with multiple entries (i.e., Tables 2, 3, 4, 6 and 9), the ACA provisions are grouped based on whether they reauthorize funding for existing programs or authorize funding for new programs. Where available, the table entry includes the Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance (CFDA) number for the grant program.⁸ Unless otherwise stated, all references in the tables to the Secretary refer to the HHS Secretary.

⁶ Not applicable if the funding is to support programs and activities carried out by the federal agency.

⁷ The funding amounts in the tables are taken from HHS agency budget documents available at <http://www.hhs.gov/budget/>.

⁸ CFDA is a government-wide compendium of federal grant and other assistance programs. Each program is assigned a unique five-digit number, XX.XXX, where the first two digits represent the funding agency and the second three digits represent the program. Programs funded by the Department of Health and Human Services begin with the number 93. For more information, see <https://www.cfda.gov>.

Most, though not all, of the existing grant programs that were reauthorized under the ACA continue to receive annual discretionary appropriations. However, these programs typically are funded at levels below the amounts authorized by the law. The federal health centers program (see Table 2) and the NHSC (see Table 3) are particularly noteworthy in this regard. Both programs have seen a significant decrease in their discretionary funding since FY2010 and, increasingly, are being supported by mandatory ACA funds from the Community Health Center Fund (CHCF; see text box below). Indeed, CHCF funds have become the sole source of funding for the NHSC, which has not received an annual discretionary appropriation since FY2011. In addition, mandatory ACA funds from the Prevention and Public Health Fund (PPHF; see text box below) have supplemented, and in some cases supplanted, annual discretionary appropriations for a number of established programs, including ones that were reauthorized by the ACA.⁹

ACA Mandatory Spending

Most of the mandatory (i.e., direct) spending under the ACA is for expanding health insurance coverage. This spending includes the premium tax credits and cost-sharing subsidies, the federal government's share of the costs of Medicaid expansion, and tax credits for small employers. The ACA also included numerous appropriations that provide billions of dollars of mandatory funds for new and existing programs. For example, the law provided funding for several temporary insurance programs and for grants to states to plan and establish health insurance exchanges. It also provided a permanent appropriation, available for 10-year periods, for a new Center for Medicare & Medicaid Innovation within CMS to test and implement innovative health care payment and service delivery models.

Finally, the ACA created four special funds and appropriated amounts to each one:

- The Community Health Center Fund (CHCF), to which the ACA appropriated a total of $11 billion over the five-year period FY2011-FY2015, is providing supplementary funding for the federal health centers program and the National Health Service Corps (NHSC). Both programs are administered by the HHS Health Resources and Services Administration (HRSA).
- The Prevention and Public Health Fund (PPHF), to which the ACA provided a permanent annual appropriation, is intended to support prevention, wellness, and other public health programs and activities administered by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) and other HHS agencies.
- The Patient-Centered Outcomes Research Trust Fund (PCORTF) is supporting comparative effectiveness research over a 10-year period (FY2010-FY2019) with a mix of appropriations, some of which are offset by revenue from a fee imposed on health plans, as well as transfers from the Medicare Part A and Part B trust funds.
- The Health Insurance Reform Implementation Fund (HIRIF), to which the ACA appropriated $1 billion, is helping cover the administrative costs of implementing the law.

For details on all the ACA's mandatory appropriations and the status of obligation of these funds, see CRS Report R41301, Appropriations and Fund Transfers in the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (ACA), by C. Stephen Redhead. Lawmakers have also used the annual appropriations process to rescind some of the mandatory funds provided by the ACA; see CRS Report R43289, Legislative Actions to Repeal, Defund, or Delay the Affordable Care Act, by C. Stephen Redhead and Janet Kinzer.

Few of the new grant programs authorized by the ACA have received any discretionary funding.¹⁰ Several of these new programs, however, have received PPHF funds.¹¹

⁹ These programs include (1) Sec. 5301, Primary Care Training and Enhancement Program, see Table 3; (2) Sec. 10501(m)(2), Public Health and Preventive Medicine Programs, see Table 3; (3) Sec. 4003, Clinical and Community Preventive Services Task Forces, see Table 4; and (4) Sec. 4204, Immunizations Programs, see Table 4.

¹¹ These programs include (1) Sec. 5208, Nurse-Managed Health Clinics, see Table 2; (2) Sec. 5306, Mental and Behavioral Health Education and Training Grants, see Table 3; (3) Sec. 5102, State Health Care Workforce (continued...)

CBO estimated that the ACA's discretionary spending provisions, if fully funded by future appropriations acts, would result in appropriations of almost $100 billion over the period FY2012-FY2021.¹² However, much of that funding—about $85 billion—would be for three programs that were in existence prior to, and whose funding was reauthorized by, the ACA; namely, the federal health centers program, the NHSC, and the IHS.

Administrative Spending on Health Insurance Exchanges

In addition to funding the discretionary grant programs and other activities that were authorized (or reauthorized) by the ACA, both CMS and the IRS are incurring significant administrative costs to implement the law. Table 1 summarizes the sources and amounts of CMS's administrative funding for health insurance exchange operations to date. Congress instructed CMS to provide this information in the agency's FY2015 budget submission. There is no comparable ACA funding information publicly available for the IRS, which is administering the law's tax provisions including the premium tax credit and other subsidies.

During the period FY2010 through FY2012, CMS obligated a total of $456 million to support exchange operations. Of that amount, $331 million came from annual discretionary appropriations that cover the routine costs of running federal agencies, including salaries and expenses: $307 million from CMS's Program Management account, and an additional $24 million from the HHS Departmental Management account. The remaining $125 million came from the HIRIF.

CMS's administrative costs to support exchange operations totaled $1,545 million in FY2013. In the FY2013 budget CMS requested an increase of $1,001 million for its Program Management account for ACA implementation and other activities. However, Congress did not provide any additional discretionary funds for ACA implementation in FY2013. CMS instead used funds from other sources to help pay for ongoing administrative costs associated with exchange operations. Those funds included (1) discretionary funds transferred from other HHS accounts under the Secretary's transfer authority;¹³ (2) expired discretionary funds from the Nonrecurring Expenses Fund (NEF);¹⁴ (3) mandatory funds from the HIRIF; and (4) mandatory funds from the PPHF (see Table 1).

Note: CBO's estimate of ACA discretionary spending includes (1) amounts specified in ACA, plus estimated amounts for subsequent years (adjusted for anticipated inflation) where ACA specified an amount for the first year (FY2010 or FY2011) and authorized SSAN for subsequent years; and (2) estimated amounts for subsequent years (adjusted for anticipated inflation) where there is an appropriation for FY2010 under prior law and ACA authorized the appropriation of SSAN for later years. The CBO estimate does not include new ACA programs for which the law provided only an authorization for the appropriation of SSAN.

¹³ The L-HHS-ED Appropriations Act provides the HHS Secretary with limited authority to transfer funds between appropriations accounts. No more than 1% of the funds in any given account may be transferred, and recipient accounts may not be increased by more than 3%. Congressional appropriators must be notified in advance of any transfer.

In FY2014, CMS's administrative costs for exchange operations will total an estimated $1,390 million. The agency requested an increase of $1,397 million for its Program Management account in the FY2014 budget for ACA implementation and other activities. But as in the previous fiscal year Congress did not give CMS any additional funding. Once again, the agency is relying on transferred departmental funds as well as NEF and HIRIF funding to help support exchange operations in FY2014. In addition, CMS will collect an estimated $200 million in exchange user fees (see Table 1).

The President's FY2015 budget includes a total of $1,788 for exchange operations. Of that amount, $629 million is from CMS's Program Management account, and the remaining $1,159 million is projected to come from exchange user fees. The FY2015 budget does not identify any other sources of funding to support exchange operations (see Table 1). CMS has requested an increase of $227 million for its Program Management account in FY2015 to help support ACA implementation and other activities.

Recent Actions to Reduce Discretionary Spending

Since FY2010, Congress has taken a number of steps to curb federal discretionary spending. During negotiations to complete the FY2011 appropriations process and avert a government shutdown in early 2011, lawmakers agreed to cuts in discretionary spending for a broad range of agencies and programs. Congress and the President then enacted the Budget Control Act (BCA) of 2011,¹⁵ which established enforceable discretionary spending limits, or caps, for each of FY2012 through FY2021. Operating under BCA-imposed discretionary spending caps, Congress further reduced funding for many programs during the FY2012, FY2013, and FY2014 appropriations cycles.

The BCA also triggered annual spending reductions beginning in FY2013 for both defense and nondefense spending. All the spending on programs and activities summarized in this report falls within the nondefense category. The BCA spending reductions involve a combination of automatic across-the-board spending cuts to nonexempt programs through a process known as sequestration, as well as lowering the BCA-imposed discretionary spending caps. More details on the BCA annual spending reductions are provided in the text box below.¹⁶

Annual Spending Reductions Under the Budget Control Act

The BCA amended the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 (BBEDCA) by establishing two budget enforcement mechanisms to reduce federal spending over the 10-year period FY2012 through FY2021. First, it established enforceable limits, or caps, on discretionary spending for each of those years. Second, the BCA created a Joint Committee on Deficit Reduction to develop legislation to further limit federal spending. The failure of the Joint Committee to agree on deficit-reduction legislation triggered automatic annual spending reductions for each of FY2013 through FY2021. The BCA specified that a total of $109 billion must be cut each year from nonexempt budget accounts. That amount is equally divided between defense and nondefense spending. Within each category—defense and nondefense—the spending cuts are divided proportionately between discretionary spending and nonexempt mandatory (i.e., direct) spending. Under the BCA, the spending reductions are achieved through a combination of sequestration (i.e., an across-the-board cancellation of budgetary resources) and lowering the BCA-imposed discretionary spending caps.

The BCA requires that the mandatory spending reductions in each category—defense and nondefense—must be executed each year by a sequestration of all nonexempt accounts, subject to the BBEDCA sequestration rules. Discretionary spending in each category is also subject to sequestration, but only in FY2013. For each of the remaining fiscal years (i.e., FY2014 through FY2021), discretionary spending reductions are to be achieved by lowering the discretionary spending caps for defense and nondefense spending by the total dollar amount of the reduction. Thus, congressional appropriators get to decide how to apportion the cuts within the lowered spending caps rather than having the cuts applied across-the-board to all nonexempt accounts through sequestration. The Office of Management and Budget (OMB) is responsible for calculating the percentages and amounts by which mandatory and discretionary spending are required to be reduced each year, and for applying the BBEDCA's sequestration exemptions and rules.

¹⁶ For a more complete analysis of the Budget Control Act of 2011 and the amendments that were made to it by the American Taxpayer Relief Act of 2012, see CRS Report R41965, The Budget Control Act of 2011, by Bill Heniff Jr., Elizabeth Rybicki, and Shannon M. Mahan; and CRS Report R42949, The American Taxpayer Relief Act of 2012: Modifications to the Budget Enforcement Procedures in the Budget Control Act, by Bill Heniff Jr.

The FY2013 sequestration order reduced spending on nonexempt nondefense mandatory programs by 5.1% and reduced nonexempt nondefense discretionary (NDD) spending by about 5.0% [Note: These amounts reflect adjustments made by the American Taxpayer Relief Act of 2012 (ATRA), which reduced the overall dollar amount that needed to be cut from FY2013 defense and nondefense spending.] For technical reasons, OMB concluded that cuts in mandatory (i.e., CHCF) funding for community health centers and migrant health centers are capped at 2%.

The FY2014 sequestration order reduced spending on nonexempt nondefense mandatory programs by 7.2%. OMB also lowered the FY2014 NDD spending cap by $37 billion. However, the Bipartisan Budget Act of 2013 (BBA) subsequently amended the BCA by establishing new discretionary spending caps for FY2014 and FY2015 and eliminating the requirement that these caps be lowered pursuant to the BCA's annual spending reductions. As a result, the new FY2014 NDD cap is more than $22 billion above the BCA-lowered FY2014 cap that it replaces, and almost $24 billion above the FY2013 post-sequestration NDD funding level.

The FY2015 sequestration order reduces spending on nonexempt nondefense mandatory programs by 7.3%. Pursuant to the BBA, the FY2015 NDD spending cap is virtually unchanged from the final FY2014 level.

Unless otherwise noted, the FY2010-FY2014 funding figures in the tables in this report represent final amounts reflecting sequestration and other adjustments. Many of the grant programs listed in the tables that have received annual appropriations since FY2010 have seen their discretionary funding decline. As noted earlier, some of these programs are being supported by mandatory funds provided by the ACA.

Trends in Nondefense Discretionary Spending

According to CBO, nondefense discretionary (NDD) spending has generally ranged between about 3% and 4% of gross domestic product (GDP) since 1962, the first year for which there are comparable data. The two exceptions to this trend are the period 1975-1981, when NDD spending averaged almost 5% of GDP, and the period 2009-2011, when stimulus spending increased NDD outlays above 4% of GDP. NDD spending as a share of GDP is now declining and fell to 3.5% in 2013, CBO estimates. Under the current deficit-reduction policies, CBO projects that NDD spending in 2016 will fall to its lowest level as a share of GDP since 1962 and will continue to decline thereafter.¹⁷
