

Congressional Research Service

Informing the legislative debate since 1914

Federal Mandatory Minimum Sentencing: The 18 U.S.C. 924(c) Tack-On in Cases Involving Drugs or Violence

Charles Doyle

Senior Specialist in American Public Law

September 16, 2015

Congressional Research Service

7-5700

www.crs.gov

R41412

Summary

Section 924(c) requires the imposition of one of a series of mandatory minimum terms of imprisonment upon conviction for misconduct involving the firearm and the commission of a federal crime of violence or a federal drug trafficking offense. The terms vary according to the type of firearm used, the manner of the firearm's involvement, and whether the conviction involves a single, first-time offense. Liability extends to co-conspirators and to those who aid or abet in the commission of a violation of the section.

If a machine gun, silencer, short barreled rifle, short barreled shotgun, or body armor is involved, the offense is punished more severely. If the firearm is brandished or discharged, the offense is punished more severely. Repeat offenders are likewise punished more severely. Twenty-five-year mandatory minimum terms for multiple offenses must be served consecutively. The mandatory minimum terms range from imprisonment for five years to imprisonment for life; consecutive mandatory minimum terms may exceed 100 years. In each case the maximum term is life imprisonment.

The United States Sentencing Commission has suggested that Congress consider amending Section 924(c) to (1) address the "stacking" of 25-year charges for multiple offenses; (2) require a prior conviction to trigger repeat offender enhancements; (3) provide sentencing courts with discretion over whether to impose concurrent or consecutive sentences; and (4) clarify the statutory definitions of the terms used in Section 924(c).

Section 924(c) has withstood constitutional challenges based on the Second Amendment's right to bear arms; the Eighth Amendment's cruel and unusual punishments prohibition; the Sixth Amendment's right to jury trial; the Fifth Amendment's double jeopardy and due process proscriptions; and the Constitution's structural limitations on preservation of the separation of powers and on Congress's authority under the Commerce Clause.

Contents

Introduction	1
Elements	3
Firearm	3
Predicate Offenses.....	3
Possession in Furtherance	5
Use or Carry	6
Discharge and Brandish	7
Short Barrels, Semiautomatics, Machine Guns, and Bombs.....	7
Aiding, Abetting, and Conspiracy	8
Sentencing Considerations	9
Sentencing Guidelines.....	10
Armor Piercing Ammunition.....	11
Constitutional Considerations	12
Second Amendment	12
Cruel and Unusual Punishment	13
Juries, Grand Juries, and Due Process.....	16
Double Jeopardy.....	19
Commerce Clause Authority	20
Separation of Powers.....	20
Due Process.....	21
Equal Protection.....	21
Sentencing Commission Recommendations	22
18 U.S.C. 924(c) (Text)	23

Contacts

Author Contact Information	24
----------------------------------	----

Introduction

Mandatory minimums are found in two federal firearms statutes. One, the Armed Career Criminal Act, deals exclusively with recidivists.¹ The other, §924(c), attaches one of several mandatory minimum terms of imprisonment whenever a firearm is used or possessed during and in relation to a federal crime of violence or drug trafficking.² Section 924(c) has been the subject of repeated Supreme Court litigation³ and regular congressional amendment since its inception in 1968.⁴

Section 924(c), in its current form, imposes one of several different minimum sentences when a firearm is used or possessed in furtherance of another federal crime of violence or of drug trafficking. The mandatory minimums, imposed in addition to the sentence imposed for the underlying crime of violence or drug trafficking, vary depending upon the circumstances:

- imprisonment for not less than five years, unless one of higher mandatory minimums below applies;
- imprisonment for not less than seven years, if a firearm is brandished;
- imprisonment for not less than 10 years, if a firearm is discharged;
- imprisonment for not less than 10 years, if a firearm is a short-barreled rifle or shotgun or is a semi-automatic weapon;
- imprisonment for not less than 15 years, if the offense involves the armor piercing ammunition;
- imprisonment for not less than 25 years, if the offender has a prior conviction for violation of §924(c);
- imprisonment for not less than 30 years, if the firearm is a machine gun or destructive device or is equipped with a silencer; and
- imprisonment for life, if the offender has a prior conviction for violation of §924(c) and if the firearm is a machine gun or destructive device or is equipped with a silencer.⁵

The mandatory minimum sentences were added to §924 as a floor amendment to the Gun Control Act of 1968.⁶ The amendment, as introduced, called for a 10-year minimum of imprisonment to be imposed when a firearm was used in the commission of various state and federal crimes of

¹ 18 U.S.C. 924(e).

² 18 U.S.C. 924(c).

³ See United States v. O'Brien, 560 U.S. 218, 221 (2010) (“The Court must interpret, once again, §924(c) of Title 18 of the United States Code”). Other decisions include Alleyne v. United States, 133 S.Ct. 2151 (2013); United States v. Abbott, 131 S.Ct. 18 (2010); Dean v. United States, 556 U.S. 568 (2009); Watson v. United States, 552 U.S. 74 (2007); Harris v. United States, 536 U.S. 545 (2002); Castillo v. United States, 530 U.S. 120 (2000); Mascarello v. United States, 524 U.S. 125 (1998); United States v. Gonzales, 520 U.S. 1 (1997); Bailey v. United States, 516 U.S. 137 (1995); Smith v. United States, 508 U.S. 223 (1993); Deal v. United States, 508 U.S. 129 (1993).

⁴ E.g., P.L. 90-618, 82 Stat. 1223 (1968), 18 U.S.C. 924(c)(1970 ed.); P.L. 91-644, §13, 84 Stat. 1889 (1971), 18 U.S.C. 924(c) (1976 ed.); P.L. 98-473, §1005, 98 Stat. 2138 (1984), 18 U.S.C. 924(c) (1982 ed.)(Supp. II); P.L. 99-308, 100 Stat. 457 (1986), 18 U.S.C. 924(c) (1982 ed.)(Supp. IV); P.L. 100-690, §6460, 102 Stat. 4373 (1988), 18 U.S.C. 924(c) (1988 ed.); P.L. 101-647, §1101, 104 Stat. 4829 (1990), 18 U.S.C. 924(c) (1988 ed.)(Supp. II); P.L. 105-386, §1, 112 Stat. 3469 (1998), 18 U.S.C. 924(c) (2000 ed.); P.L. 109-92, §6(b), 119 Stat. 2102 (2005), 18 U.S.C. 924(c)(2000 ed.)(Supp. V).

⁵ 18 U.S.C. 924(c)(1), (5).

⁶ P.L. 90-618, 82 Stat. 1223 (1968).

violence.⁷ A substitute amendment reduced the minimums from 10 years to one year for a first offense, and from 25 years to five years of subsequent offenses.⁸ It limited its application to federal felonies, but also barred a sentencing court from imposing the sanction as a concurrent sentence, from suspending the sentence, or from imposing a probationary sentence.⁹ The impact was somewhat mitigated by a 1971 amendment which reduced the minimum for second and subsequent offenses from five years to two years.¹⁰ Moreover, until the Sentencing Reform Act of 1984 eliminated parole, a federal offender was eligible for parole after serving the lesser of one-third of his sentence or 10 years.¹¹

The Sentencing Reform Act also rewrote §924(c) limiting its application to firearms-related federal crimes of violence, but changing its mandatory minimums to a flat five-year term of imprisonment for first offenders and a flat 10-year term for a second or subsequent conviction.¹²

Section 104 of the Firearms Owners Protection Act expanded the predicate offenses to include drug trafficking as well as crimes of violence and added a flat 10-year minimum for cases involving machine guns or silencers (a flat 20-years for a second or subsequent offense)¹³—which two years later Congress increased to flat sentences of 30 years and life imprisonment, respectively.¹⁴ Congress added the shot-barreled firearms and destructive device provisions in 1990.¹⁵

Originally, §924(c) condemned only “use” of a firearm in connection with certain federal offenses.¹⁶ Then the Supreme Court pointed out in Bailey that the word “use” demands more than simple possession.¹⁷ Congress amended the section in 1998 to outlaw not only use during and in relation to a predicate offense, but possession “in furtherance” of a predicate drug trafficking or violent offense as well.¹⁸

⁷ 114 Cong. Rec. 22229 (1968)(amendment offered by Rep. Casey). The original amendment would have also established a 25-year minimum for second and subsequent offenses, Id.

⁸ 114 Cong. Rec. 222231 (1968)(substitute amendment offered by Rep. Poff).

⁹ Id. Further modifications were offered during the course of the debate, but the language enacted was in large measure that of the Poff substitute, see 114 Cong. Rec. 22229-22248 (1968); H.Rept. 90-1956, at 12, 31-32 (1968)(confining the concurrent, suspended, and probationary sentencing provisions to second and subsequent violations), and 82 Stat. 1223 (1968), 18 U.S.C. 924(c)(1970 ed.).

¹⁰ Section 13, P.L. 91-644, 84 Stat. 1889 (1971), 18 U.S.C. 924(c) (1976 ed.).

¹¹ 18 U.S.C. 4205 (1976 ed.).

¹² Section 1005, P.L. 98-473, 98 Stat. 2138 (1984), 18 U.S.C. 924(c) (1982 ed.)(Supp. II).

¹³ P.L. 99-308, 100 Stat. 457 (1986), 18 U.S.C. 924(c) (1976 ed.)(Supp. IV).

¹⁴ Section 6460, P.L. 100-690, 102 Stat. 4373 (1988), 18 U.S.C. 924(c) (1988 ed.).

¹⁵ Section 1101, P.L. 101-647, 104 Stat. 4829 (1990), 18 U.S.C. 924(c) (1988 ed.)(Supp. II).

¹⁶ 18 U.S.C. 924(c)(1970 ed.).

¹⁷ Bailey v. United States, 516 U.S. 137, 143 (1995)(emphasis in the original)(Section 924(c) “requires evidence sufficient to show an active employment of the firearm by the defendant, a use that makes the firearm an operative factor in relation to the predicate offense.... ‘[U]se’ must connote more than mere possession of a firearm by a person who commits a drug offense”).

¹⁸ Section 1, P.L. 105-386, 112 Stat. 3469 (1998), 18 U.S.C. 924(c) (2000 ed.). The armor piercing ammunition provisions were added in 2005, Section 6(b), P.L. 109-92, 119 Stat. 2102 (2005), 18 U.S.C. 924(c). United States v. Gurka, 605 F.3d 40, 43 (1st Cir. 2010).

Elements

Firearm

Section 924(c) outlaws possession of a firearm in furtherance of, or use of a firearm during and in relation to, a predicate offense. A “firearm” for purposes of §924(c) includes not only guns (“weapons ... which will or [are] designed to or may readily be converted to expel a projectile by the action of an explosive”), but silencers and explosives as well.¹⁹ It includes firearms that are not loaded or are broken.²⁰ It does not include toys or imitations.²¹ Nevertheless, the government need not produce the gun itself at trial. It need do no more than “present sufficient testimony, including the testimony of law witnesses, in order to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that a defendant used, possessed or carried a ‘firearm’ as that term is defined for purposes of §924(c).”²² Yet conviction must rest on some evidence of the presence of a firearm.²³

Predicate Offenses

Section 924(c) is triggered when a firearm is used or possessed in furtherance of a predicate offense. The predicate offenses are crimes of violence and certain drug trafficking crimes. The drug trafficking predicates include any felony violation of the Controlled Substances Act, the Controlled Substances Import and Export Act, or the Maritime Drug Law Enforcement Act.²⁴

The crime of violence predicates are statutorily defined as any federal felony that either (A) “has as an element the use, attempted use, or threatened use of physical force against the person or property of another,” or (B) “by its nature, involves a substantial risk that physical force against the person or property of another may be used in the course of committing the offense.”²⁵

The Supreme Court has addressed several other aspects of §924(c), but it has yet to decide what constitutes a crime of violence for purposes of the section. The Court has, however, construed comparable language in the federal criminal code’s general definition of the term “crime of violence” in 18 U.S.C. 16,²⁶ and the roughly corresponding language in the Armed Career Criminal Act’s definition of the term “violent felony” in 18 U.S.C. 924(e)(2)(B).²⁷

¹⁹ 18 U.S.C. 921(a)(3), (4) (“(3) The term ‘firearm’ means (A) any weapon (including a starter gun) which will or is designed to or may readily be converted to expel a projectile by the action of an explosive; ... (C) any firearm muffler or firearm silencer; or (D) any destructive device.... (4) The term ‘destructive device’ means - (A) any explosive, incendiary, or poison gas - (i) bomb, (ii) grenade, (iii) rocket having a propellant charge of more than four ounces, (iv) missile having an explosive or incendiary charge of more than one-quarter ounce, (v) mine, or (vi) device similar to any of the devices described in the preceding clauses ...”); United States v. York, 600 F.3d 347, 354 (5th Cir. 2010) (Molotov cocktail constitutes a “firearm” for purposes of §924(c)); United States v. Tomkins, 782 F.3d 338, 345 (7th Cir. 2015)(pipe bombs constitute firearms for purposes of §924(c).

²⁰ United States v. Cooper, 714 F.3d 873, 881 (5th Cir. 2013).

²¹ United States v. Garrido, 596 F.3d 613, 617 (9th Cir. 2010)(“Possession of a toy or replica gun cannot sustain a conviction under §924(c)”); United States v. Roberson, 459 F.3d 39, 47 (1st Cir. 2006).

²² United States v. King, 751 F.3d 1268,1274 (11th Cir. 2014); see also, United States v. Sherer, 770 F.3d 407, 412 (6th Cir. 2014); United States v. Kamahale, 748 F.3d 984, 1010 (10th Cir. 2014).

²³ United States v. Feliciano, 761 F.3d 1202, 1212 (11th Cir. 2014).

²⁴ 18 U.S.C. 924(c)(2), referring to 21 U.S.C. 801-904, 21 U.S.C. 951-971, and 46 U.S.C. 70501-70507, respectively.

²⁵ 18 U.S.C. 924(c)(3)(A), (B).

²⁶ 18 U.S.C. 16 (“The term ‘crime of violence’ means- (a) an offense that has as an element the use, attempted use, or threatened use of physical force against the person or property of another, or (b) any other offense that is a felony and (continued...)”).

Application of the element clause of the definition is fairly straightforward. A crime, one of whose elements is use or threatened use of force, qualifies as a crime of violence.²⁸ Conversely, “when a statute defines an offense using a single, indivisible set of elements that allows for both violent and nonviolent means of commission, the offense is not a categorical crime of violence.”²⁹

Application of the inherent nature clause, sometimes referred to as the residual clause, is somewhat more difficult. For example, the federal courts of appeals have been unable to reach a consensus on the question of whether unlawful possession of a firearm may serve as a predicate offense for purposes §924(c) or §16(b).³⁰ In fact, the Supreme Court recently declared unconstitutionally vague similar language in the residual clause of the Armed Career Criminal Act (ACCA)—“any crime ... that ... is burglary, arson ... otherwise involves conduct that presents a serious potential risk of physical injury to another.”³¹

A later court has observed that

Johnson was the Court’s fifth attempt in the past decade at defining the contours of the ACCA’s residual clause, an experiment it now deems a “failed enterprise.” Reviewing its efforts, the Court concluded these “repeated attempts and repeated failures to craft a principled and objective standard out of the residual clause confirm its hopeless indeterminacy.” Simply put, no consistently applicable principle exists with which to differentiate crimes which pose a serious risk of injury—similar to that posed by the enumerated crimes in §924—from those that do not. As a result, the provision violates the Fifth Amendment’s due process protections because it fails to “give ordinary people fair notice of the conduct it punishes” and invites “arbitrary enforcement” of the law.³² that, by its nature, involves a substantial risk that physical force against the person or property of another may be used in the course of committing the offense”).

(...continued)

²⁷ 18 U.S.C. 924(e)(2)(B)(“[T]he term ‘violent felony’ means any crime punishable by imprisonment for a term exceeding one year or any act of juvenile delinquency involving the use or carrying of a firearm, knife, or destructive device that would be punishable by imprisonment for such term if committed by an adult, that- (i) has as an element the use, attempted use, or threatened use of physical force against the person of another; or (ii) is burglary, arson, or extortion, involves use of explosives, or otherwise involves conduct that presents a serious potential risk of physical injury to another”).

²⁸ Johnson v. United States, 779 F.3d 125, 128-29 (2d Cir. 2015)(bank robbery constitutes a crime of violence for purposes of §924(c)); United States v. Kirklin, 727 F.3d 711, 715 n.1 (7th Cir. 2013)(attempted bank robbery constitutes a crime of violence for purposes of §924(c)).

²⁹ United States v. Fuertes, ___ F.3d ___, ___ *8 (4th Cir. Aug. 18, 2015)(18 U.S.C. 1591, which outlaws commercial sex trafficking using force (violent) or fraud (nonviolent) does not qualify as a crime of violence for purposes of §924(c), because “after Descamps [v. United States, 133 S.Ct. 2276, 2283 (2013)(construing the Armed Career Criminal Act)], when a statute defines an offense using a single, indivisible set of elements that allows for both violent and nonviolent means of commission, the offense is not a categorical crime of violence”).

³⁰ United States v. Serafin, 562 F.3d 1105, 1107-1116 (10th Cir. 2009)(“[T]he danger from an unregistered short-barreled rifle is inherent to its use, not merely in its possession. Although Serafin clearly disregarded the law by possessing an illegal short-barreled rifle, we must confine the scope of §924(c)(3)(B) to active, violent crimes which pose a substantial risk that force may be used during the course of the offense”), citing among others United States v. Hull, 456 F.3d 133, 140 (3d Cir. 2006) (possession of an unregistered pipe bomb [included within the definition of firearm in 18 U.S.C. 921(a)(3), (4)] was not a crime of violence under 18 U.S.C. 16); Henry v. Bureau of Immigration & Customs Enforcement, 493 F.3d 303, 309 (3d Cir. 2007)(possession of an unregistered pipe bomb with the intent to use was a crime of violence under §16); United States v. Jennings, 195 F.3d 795, 798 (5th Cir. 1999)(possession of a pipe bomb [without reference to intent] was a crime of violence under §16).

³¹ Johnson v. United States, 135 S.Ct. 2551, 2563 (2015)(speaking of 18 U.S.C. 924(e)(2)(B)(ii)). Recall that §924(c)’s residual clause applies to “a felony ... that by its nature, involves a substantial risk that physical force against the person or property of another may be used in the course of committing the offense”).

³² United States v. Snyder, 793 F.3d 1241, 1245 (10th Cir. 2015), quoting, Johnson v. United States, 135 S.Ct. at 2558.

It might appear at first glance that the same could be said of §924(c). The Johnson Court, however, made it clear that its decision did not apply to the ACCA's elements clause.³³ More to the point, the Court went out of its way to distinguish the ACCA's residual clause from other instances where "grave risk" or "substantial risk" standards, such as in §924(c), are used.³⁴ The defect in the ACCA's residual clause, in the eyes of the Court, was its required nexus to the enumerated crimes (burglary, arson, etc.),³⁵ an infirmity from which §924(c) does not suffer.

Possession in Furtherance

Section 924(c) has two alternative firearm-nexus elements: possession in furtherance and carrying or use.³⁶ The possession in furtherance element of the offense requires that the defendant "(1) committed a drug trafficking crime [or other predicate offense]; (2) knowingly possessed a firearm; and (3) possessed the firearm in furtherance of the drug trafficking crime [or other predicate offense]."³⁷ The "possession" component may take the form of either actual or constructive possession. "Constructive possession exists when a person does not have possession but instead knowingly has the power and the intention at a given time to exercise dominion and control over an object, either directly or through others."³⁸

The "in furtherance" component compels the government to show some nexus between possession of a firearm and a predicate offense, that is, to show that the firearm furthered, advanced, moved forward, promoted, or in some way facilitated the predicate offense.³⁹ This requires more than proof of the presence of a firearm in the same location as the predicate offense.⁴⁰ Most circuits have identified specific factors that commonly allow a court to distinguish guilty possession from innocent "possession at the scene," particularly in a drug case, that is, "(1) type of drug activity [or violent crime] that is being conducted, (2) accessibility of the firearm, (3) the type of weapon, (4) whether the possession is illegal, (5) whether the gun is loaded, (6) the proximity to the drugs or drug profits, and (7) the time and circumstances under which the gun is found."⁴¹

³³ Id. at 2563.

³⁴ Id. at 2561.

³⁵ Id.

³⁶ United States v. Burnett, 773 F.3d 122, 134 (3d Cir. 2014) ("Section 924(c) has two separate prongs, the violation of either standing alone is sufficient to support a conviction under the statute: (1) 'us[ing] or carry[ing]' a firearm 'during and in relation to' the underlying offense; or (2) 'possess[ing] a firearm 'in furtherance' of the underlying offense.... By making this distinction, Congress may well have intended 'in furtherance' to impose a more stringent standard than 'in relation to'").

³⁷ United States v. Bobadilla-Pagan, 747 F.3d 26, 35 (1st Cir. 2014); United States v. Perez, 661 F.3d 568, 576 (11th Cir. 2011).

³⁸ United States v. Taylor, ___ F.3d ___, ___ *6 (6th Cir. Aug. 25, 2015); United States v. Webster, 775 F.3d 897, 905-906 (7th Cir. 2015); United States v. Booker, 774 F.3d 928, 929-31 (8th Cir. 2014).

³⁹ United States v. Pineda, 770 F.3d 313, 317 (4th Cir. 2014); United States v. Johnson, 745 F.3d 866, 870 (8th Cir. 2014); United States v. Renteria, 720 F.3d 1245, 1255 (10th Cir. 2013); United States v. Eller, 670 F.3d 762, 765 (7th Cir. 2012); United States v. Pena, 586 F.3d 105, 113 (1st Cir. 2009); United States v. London, 568 F.3d 553, 559 (5th Cir. 2009); United States v. Lopez-Garcia, 565 F.3d 1306, 1322 (11th Cir. 2009).

⁴⁰ United States v. Renteria, 720 F.3d at 1255; United States v. Eller, 670 F.3d at 765; United States v. Pena, 586 F.3d at 113; United States v. Penney, 576 F.3d 297, 315 (1st Cir. 2009).

⁴¹ United States v. Renteria, 720 F.3d at 1255; see also, United States v. Brown, 715 F.3d 985, 993-94 (6th Cir. 2013); United States v. Gill, 685 F.3d 606, 611 (6th Cir. 2012); United States v. Johnson, 677 F.3d 138, 143 (3d Cir. 2012); United States v. Eller, 670 F.3d at 766; United States v. London, 568 F.3d at 559; United States v. Lopez-Garcia, 565 F.3d at 1322; United States v. Perry, 560 F.3d 246, 254 (4th Cir. 2009); see also United States v. Chavez, 549 F.3d 119, (continued...)

Although the Supreme Court has made it clear that acquiring a firearm in an illegal drug transaction does not constitute “use” in violation of §924(c),⁴² several of the circuits have found that such acquisition may constitute “possession in furtherance.”⁴³

Use or Carry

The “use” outlawed in the use or carriage branch of §924(c) requires that a firearm be actively employed “during and in relation to” a predicate offense, that is, either a crime of violence or a drug trafficking offense.⁴⁴ A defendant “uses” a firearm during or in relation to a drug trafficking offense when he uses it to acquire drugs in a drug deal,⁴⁵ or when he uses it as collateral in a drug deal,⁴⁶ but not when he accepts a firearm in exchange for drugs in a drug deal.⁴⁷ The “carry[ing]” that the section outlaws encompasses instances when a firearm is carried on the defendant’s person as well as when it is simply readily accessible in vehicle during and in relation to a predicate offense.⁴⁸

A firearm is used or carried “during or in relation” to a predicate offense when it has “some purpose or effect with respect” to the predicate offense; “its presence or involvement cannot be the result of accident or coincidence.”⁴⁹ The government must show that the availability of the firearm played an integral role in the predicate offense.⁵⁰ It need not show that the firearm was used “in furtherance” of the predicate offense.⁵¹

(...continued)

130 (2d Cir. 2008)(noting after quoting the factors that, “while no conviction would lie for a drug dealer’s innocent possession of a firearm, ... a drug dealer may be punished under §924(c)(1)(A) where the charged weapon is readily accessible to protect drugs, drug proceeds, or the drug dealer himself”); but see United States v. Hector, 474 F.3d 1150, 1157 (9th Cir. 2007)(internal citations omitted)(“Although the Fifth Circuit has developed a non-exclusive list of factors ... we have concluded that this approach is not particularly helpful in close cases.... In our most recent case addressing the ‘in furtherance question,’ we reiterated the importance of the factual inquiry. We declined once again to adopt a checklist approach to deciding this issue and held that it is the totality of the circumstances, coupled with a healthy dose of a jury’s common sense when evaluating the facts in evidence, which will determine whether the evidence suffices to support a conviction”).

⁴² Watson v. United States, 552 U.S. 74 (2007).

⁴³ United States v. Gurka, 605 F.3d 40, 44 (1st Cir. 2010)(“We join the three circuits holding Watson does not affect the prong of 18 U.S.C. §924(c)(1)(A) concerned with ‘possession in furtherance’), citing in accord, United States v. Gardner, 602 F.3d 97, 103 (2d Cir. 2010); United States v. Mahan, 586 F.3d 1185, 1189 (9th Cir. 2009); see also, United States v. Miranda, 666 F.3d 1280, 1282-284 (11th Cir. 2012); United States v. Dickerson, 705 F.3d 683, 688-90 (7th Cir. 2013).

⁴⁴ Bailey v. United States, 516 U.S. 137, 143 (1995); United States v. Isnadin, 742 F.3d 1278, 1307 (11th Cir. 2014); United States v. Haynes, 582 F.3d 686, 704 (7th Cir. 2009); United States v. Combs, 369 F.3d 925, 932 (6th Cir. 2004).

⁴⁵ Smith v. United States, 508 U.S. 223, 228 (1993); Bailey v. United States, 516 U.S. 137, 148 (1995).

⁴⁶ United States v. Cox, 324 F.3d 77, 82 (2d Cir. 2003).

⁴⁷ Watson v. United States, 552 U.S. at 78.

⁴⁸ Muscarello v. United States, 524 U.S. 125, 126 (1998)(“The question before us is whether the phrase ‘carries a firearm’ is limited to the carrying of firearms on the person. We hold that it is not so limited. Rather, it also applies to a person who knowingly possesses and carries a firearm in a vehicle, including locked in a glove compartment or trunk of a car, which the person accompanies”); United States v. Franklin, 561 F.3d 398, 403 (5th Cir. 2009); United States v. Winder, 557 F.3d 1129, 1138-139 (10th Cir. 2009); United States v. Robinson, 390 F.3d 853, 878 (6th Cir. 2005); United States v. Williams, 344 F.3d 365, 370 (3d Cir. 2003).

⁴⁹ United States v. Mashek, 606 F.3d 922, 930 (8th Cir. 2010), quoting Smith v. United States, 508 U.S. 223, 238 (1993); United States v. Roberson, 459 F.3d 39, 48 (1st Cir. 2006); United States v. Combs, 369 F.3d 925, 933 (6th Cir. 2004); United States v. Williams, 344 F.3d 365, 371 (3d Cir. 2003).

⁵⁰ United States v. Burkley, 513 F.3d 1183, 1189-190 (10th Cir., 2008)(“A firearm is carried during and in relation to the (continued...)”).

Discharge and Brandish

The basic five-year mandatory minimum penalty for using, carrying, or possessing a firearm in the course of a predicate offense becomes a seven-year mandatory minimum if a firearm was brandished during the course of the offense and becomes a 10-year mandatory minimum if a firearm was discharged during the course of the offense.⁵² The discharge provision applies even if the firearm is discharged inadvertently.⁵³ Whether a firearm is discharged or brandished is a question that after Alleyne must be presented to the jury and proven beyond a reasonable doubt.⁵⁴ A firearm is brandished for these purposes when (1) it is displayed or its presence made known (2) in order to intimidate another.⁵⁵ Intimidation is a necessary feature of brandishing, but it is no less present when the fear is induced by using the gun as a club rather than merely displaying it.⁵⁶

Short Barrels, Semiautomatics, Machine Guns, and Bombs

For some time, §924(c) consisted of a single long paragraph. When Congress added the “possession in furtherance” language, it parsed the section. Now, the general, brandish, and discharge mandatory penalties provisions appear in one part.⁵⁷ The provisions for offenses involving a short-barreled rifle or shotgun, a semiautomatic assault weapon, a silencer, a machinegun, or explosives appear in a second part.⁵⁸ The provisions for second and consequent convictions appear in a third part.⁵⁹ underlying crime when the defendant avails himself of the weapon and ... the weapon plays an integral role in the underlying offense.... Thus, the government must prove that the defendant intended the firearm to be available for use in the offense”).

(...continued)

⁵¹ United States v. Burnett, 773 F.3d 122, 134 (3d Cir. 2014).

⁵² 18 U.S.C. 924(c)(1)(A)(ii), (iii).

⁵³ Dean v. United States, 556 U.S. 568, 574 (2009); United States v. Mann, 786 F.3d 1244, 1251 (10th Cir. 2015).

⁵⁴ Alleyne v. United States, 133 S.Ct. 2151, 2163 (2013) (“Because the finding of brandishing increased the penalty to which the defendant was subjected, it was an element, which had to be found by the jury beyond a reasonable doubt”). Alleyne overruled Harris, which had held that brandishing was a sentencing factor that might be entrusted to the judge to find by a preponderance of the evidence (Harris v. United States, 535 U.S. 545, 556 (2002)); United States v. Hackett, 762 F.3d 493, 502 (6th Cir. 2014); United States v. King, 751 F.3d 1268, 1278-280 (11th Cir. 2014). The fact of a second or subsequent conviction, however, remains a sentencing factor, because the Supreme Court’s holding in Almendarez-Torres v. United States, 523 U.S. 224 (1998), to that effect has not been withdrawn, United States v. King, 751 F.3d at 1280, citing Alleyne v. United States, 133 S.Ct. at 2160 n.1.

⁵⁵ 18 U.S.C. 924(c)(4) (“For purposes of this subsection, the term ‘brandish’ means, with respect to a firearm, to display all or part of the firearm, or otherwise make the presence of the firearm known to another person, in order to intimidate that person, regardless of whether the firearm is directly visible to that person”); United States v. Carter, 560 F.3d 1107, 1114 (9th Cir. 2009); United States v. Payne, 763 F.3d 1301, 1304-1305 (11th Cir. 2014).

⁵⁶ United States v. Bowen, 527 F.3d at 1075 (10th Cir. 2008).

⁵⁷ 18 U.S.C. 924(c)(1)(emphasis added) (“(A) Except to the extent that a greater minimum sentence is otherwise provided by this subsection or by any other provision of law, any person who, during and in relation to any crime of violence or drug trafficking crime (including a crime of violence or drug trafficking crime that provides for an enhanced punishment if committed by the use of a deadly or dangerous weapon or device) for which the person may be prosecuted in a court of the United States, uses or carries a firearm, or who, in furtherance of any such crime, possesses a firearm, shall, in addition to the punishment provided for such crime of violence or drug trafficking crime - (i) be sentenced to a term of imprisonment of not less than 5 years; (ii) if the firearm is brandished, be sentenced to a term of imprisonment of not less than 7 years; and (iii) if the firearm is discharged, be sentenced to a term of imprisonment of not less than 10 years ...”).

⁵⁸ 18 U.S.C. 924(c)(1) (“... (B) If the firearm possessed by a person convicted of a violation of this subsection - (i) is a short-barreled rifle, short-barreled shotgun, or semiautomatic assault weapon, the person shall be sentenced to a term of (continued...)”).

The circuits are apparently divided over the question of whether the government must show that the defendant knew that the firearm at issue was of a particular type (i.e., short-barreled rifle or shotgun, machine gun, or bomb).⁶⁰

Prior to the division, the Supreme Court had identified as an element of a separate offense (rather than a sentencing factor) the question of whether a machinegun was the firearm used during and in relation to a predicate offense.⁶¹ The use of a short-barreled rifle, semiautomatic assault weapon, silencer, machine gun, or bomb is not a sentencing factor, but an element of a separate offense to be charged and proved to the jury beyond a reasonable doubt.⁶² The question of whether a second or subsequent conviction has occurred, however, remains a sentencing factor.⁶³

Aiding, Abetting, and Conspiracy

As a general rule, anyone who commands, counsels, aids, or abets the commission of a federal crime by another is punishable as though he had committed the crime himself.⁶⁴ “In order to aid and abet another to commit a crime it is necessary that a defendant in some sort associate himself with the venture, that he participate in it as in something that he wishes to bring about, that he seek by his action to make it succeed.”⁶⁵

The Supreme Court has said in Rosemond that to aid or abet a violation of §924(c), the assistance may be shown to have advanced either the predicate offense or the firearm use,⁶⁶ but that the defendant must be shown to have intended his efforts contribute to the success of the §924(c) violation, that is, commission of a predicate offense while armed.⁶⁷ Thus, the defendant must be shown to have known before the commission of the predicate offense that his confederate was armed.⁶⁸ imprisonment of not less than 10 years; or (ii) is a machinegun or a destructive device, or is equipped with a firearm silencer or firearm muffler, the person shall be sentenced to a term of imprisonment of not less than 30 years ...”).

(...continued)

⁵⁹ 18 U.S.C. 924(c)(1)(“... (C) In the case of a second or subsequent conviction under this subsection, the person shall - (i) be sentenced to a term of imprisonment of not less than 25 years; and (ii) if the firearm involved is a machinegun or a destructive device, or is equipped with a firearm silencer or firearm muffler, be sentenced to imprisonment for life”).

⁶⁰ United States v. Burwell, 690 F.3d 500, 510-11 (D.C.Cir. 2012)(citing cases evidencing a split).

⁶¹ Castillo v. United States, 530 U.S. 120, 121 (2000).

⁶² United States v. O'Brien, 560 U.S. 218, 235 (2010).

⁶³ United States v. Rivera-Rivera, 555 F.3d 277, 291 (1st Cir. 2009); United States v. Mejia, 545 F.3d 179, 207-208 (2d Cir. 2008). This is true even after Alleyne, because the Court continues to recognize a recidivist exception to the Apprendi rule, see, e.g., Alleyne v. United States, 133 S.Ct. 2151, 2160 n.1 (“In Almendarez-Torres v. United States, 523 U.S. 224 (1998), we recognized a narrow exception to this general rule for the fact of a prior conviction. Because the parties do not contest that decision’s vitality, we do not revisit it for purposes of our decision today”).

⁶⁴ 18 U.S.C. 2.

⁶⁵ Nye & Nissen v. United States, 336 U.S. 613, 619 (1949); see also, United States v. Centeno, 793 F.3d 378, 387 (3d Cir. 2015); United States v. Sosa, 777 F.3d 1279, 1292 (11th Cir. 2015)(“Thus, to convict under a theory of aiding and abetting, the government must prove that (1) someone committed the substantive offense; (2) the defendant contributed to and furthered the offense; and (3) the defendant intended to aid in its commission”).

⁶⁶ Rosemond v. United States, 134 S.Ct. 1240, 1247 (2014)(“Rosemond therefore could assist in §924(c)’s violation by facilitating either the drug transaction or the firearms use (or of course both”).

⁶⁷ Id. at 1248(“[A] person aids and abets a crime when (in addition to taking the requisite act) he intends to facilitate that offense’s commission.... [T]he intend must go to the specific and entire crime charged—so here, to the full scope (predicate crime plus gun use) of §924(c)”).

⁶⁸ Id. at 1249; United States v. Richardson, 793 F.3d 612, 630-31 (6th Cir. 2015); United States v. Garcia-Ortiz, 792 F.3d 184, 189 (1st Cir. 2015).

In similar manner, conspirators are liable for any foreseeable crimes committed by any of their co-conspirators in furtherance of the conspiracy.⁶⁹ The rule applies when a defendant's co-conspirator has committed a violation of §924(c).⁷⁰

Sentencing Considerations

The penalties under §924(c) were once flat sentences. For example, the penalty for use of a firearm during the course of a predicate offense was a five-year term of imprisonment.⁷¹ Now, they are simply mandatory minimums, each carrying an unspecified maximum term of life imprisonment.⁷²

A court may not avoid the mandatory minimums called for in §924(c)(1) by imposing a probationary sentence,⁷³ or by ordering that a §924(c)(1) minimum mandatory sentence be served concurrently with some other sentence.⁷⁴ Nor may a court mute the impact of a mandatory minimum sentence by artificially reducing the sentence for the predicate offense.⁷⁵

If a criminal episode involves more than one predicate offense, more than one violation of §924(c) may be punished.⁷⁶ Moreover, the second or subsequent convictions which trigger enhanced mandatory minimum penalties need not be the product of separate trials, but may be part of the same verdict. Thus, a defendant charged and convicted in a single trial on several counts may be subject to multiple, consecutive, mandatory minimum terms of imprisonment.⁷⁷

A number of defendants have sought refuge in the clause of §924(c) which introduces the section's mandatory minimum penalties with an exception: "[e]xcept to the extent that a greater ⁶⁹ Pinkerton v. United States, 328 U.S. 640, 646 (1946); Smith v. United States, 133 S.Ct. 718, 719 (2013).

⁷⁰ United States v. Soto, 794 F.3d 635, ___ (6th Cir. 2015); United States v. Adams, 789 F.3d 713, 715 (7th Cir. 2015); United States v. Reed, 780 F.3d 272, 272 (4th Cir. 2015) ("A defendant may be convicted on a §924(c) charge on the basis of a coconspirator's use of a gun if the use was in furtherance of the conspiracy and was reasonable foreseeable to the defendant").

⁷¹ 18 U.S.C. 924(c)(1976 ed.).

⁷² United States v. Lara-Ruiz, 781 F.3d 919, 924 (8th Cir. 2015); United States v. Diaz-Bermudez, 778 F.3d 309, 313-14 (1st Cir. 2015); United States v. Shabazz, 564 F.3d 280, 289 (3d Cir. 2009), citing in accord United States v. Johnson, 507 F.3d 793, 798 (2d Cir. 2007); United States v. Dare, 425 F.3d 634, 642 (9th Cir. 2005); United States v. Avery, 295 F.3d 1158, 1170 (10th Cir. 2002); United States v. Cristobal, 293 F.3d 134, 147 (4th Cir. 2002); United States v. Sandoval, 241 F.3d 549, 551 (7th Cir. 2001); United States v. Pounds, 230 F.3d 1317, 1319 (11th Cir. 2000); United States v. Silas, 227 F.3d 244, 246 (5th Cir. 2000).

⁷³ 18 U.S.C. 924(c)(1)(D)(i).

⁷⁴ 18 U.S.C. 924(c)(1)(D)(ii).

⁷⁵ United States v. Chavez, 549 F.3d 119, 135 (2d Cir. 2008); United States v. Hatcher, 501 F.3d 931, 933 (8th Cir. 2007); United States v. Franklin, 499 F.3d 578, 584-85 (6th Cir. 2007); United States v. Roberson, 474 F.3d 432, 436 (7th Cir. 2007).

⁷⁶ United States v. Sandstrom, 594 F.3d 634, 658 (8th Cir. 2010) ("... [M]ultiple underlying offenses support multiple §924(c) convictions"); United States v. Catalan-Roman, 585 F.3d 453, 472 (1st Cir. 2009); United States v. Penny, 576 F.3d 297, 316 (6th Cir. 2009) ("[W]hen two separate predicate offenses for triggering §924(c)(1) are charged and proved, a defendant may be convicted and sentenced for two separate crimes, even if both offenses were committed in the course of the same event"); United States v. Looney, 532 F.3d 392, 396 (5th Cir. 2008).

⁷⁷ Deal v. United States, 508 U.S. 129, 132 (1993); United States v. Zepeda, 792 F.3d 1103, 1116 (9th Cir. 2015); United States v. King, 751 F.3d 1268, 1280 (11th Cir. 2014); United States v. Washington, 714 F.3d 962, 969-70 (6th Cir. 2013) (noting, however, that the stacking should be governed by the rule of lenity, so that, for example, the 25-year mandatory minimums for second offenses should be stacked starting with a seven-year brandishing sentence rather than a 10-year discharge sentence); see also, United States v. Robles, 709 F.3d 98, 101 (2d Cir. 2013) ("[O]ur sister circuits have consistently upheld sentences imposing consecutive mandatory minimum terms for multiple §924(c) convictions in the same proceeding.... We agree with our sister circuits").

minimum sentence is otherwise provided by this subsection or by any other provision of law.” Defendants at one time argued that the mandatory minimums of §924(c) become inapplicable, if they are subject to a higher mandatory minimum under the predicate drug trafficking offense under the Armed Career Criminal Act (18 U.S.C. 924(e)), or some other provision of law.⁷⁸ The Supreme Court rejected the argument in Abbott.⁷⁹ The clause means that the standard five-year minimum applies except in cases where the facts trigger one of §924(c)’s higher minimums.⁸⁰

Sentencing Guidelines

The mandatory minimums of §924(c) each carry a maximum of life imprisonment. A trial court begins the sentencing process begins with the Sentencing Guidelines. The Sentencing Guidelines were once binding on federal district courts.⁸¹ They are now advisory, but remain the starting point for all federal sentencing.⁸² Section 2K2.4 of the Guidelines declares that unless the defendant qualifies as a career offender, the sentence for a violation of §924(c) shall be the minimum called for there.⁸³ The offense level adjustments in chapter 3 (victim vulnerability, role in the offense, abuse of trust/use of special skill, multiple counts, acceptable of responsibility) do not apply in such cases.⁸⁴

In the case of career offenders, §4B1.1(c) of the Guidelines supplies the operable provisions.⁸⁵ A career offender for these purposes is a defendant who has at least two prior state or federal felony convictions for a crime of violence or a drug trafficking offense.⁸⁶ The Guideline sentence for a career offender convicted of violating §924(c) varies according to whether he is convicted of §924(c) alone and whether the court awards an acceptance of responsibility reduction (the adjustment under chapter 3 are otherwise inapplicable).

A career offender convicted of §924(c) alone is subject to a sentencing range of either: (1) 262-327 (months)(if given a 3 level responsibility reduction); (2) 292-365 (months) (if given a 2 level responsibility reduction); or (3) 360 (months)-life) (if given no responsibility reduction).⁸⁷ If the defendant is convicted of other offenses in addition to §924(c), his Guidelines sentence is the greater of (1) the Guideline sentence for those offenses with the §924(c) mandatory minimum tacked on, or (2) the Guideline sentence for a violation of §924(c) alone.⁸⁸

The Guidelines themselves supply an example of how this last situation might play out:

⁷⁸ United States v. Almany, 598 F.3d 238, 241-42 (6th Cir. 2010); United States v. Whitley, 529 F.3d 150, 153-56 (2d Cir. 2008).

⁷⁹ Abbott v. United States, 131 S.Ct. 18, 23 (2010).

⁸⁰ Id.; United States v. Robles, 709 F.3d 98, 100-101 (2d Cir. 2013).

⁸¹ 18 U.S.C. 3553(b)(1) (2000 ed.).

⁸² United States v. Booker, 543 U.S. 220, 245 (2005); Gall v. United States, 552 U.S. 38, 49-50 (2007)(“[A] district court should begin all sentencing proceedings by correctly calculating the applicable Guidelines range.... [A]fter giving both parties an opportunity to argue for whatever sentence they deem appropriate, the district judge should then consider all of the §3553(a) factors to determine whether they support the sentence requested by a party”).

⁸³ E.g., United States v. Fernandez-Garay, 788 F.3d 1, 6 (1st Cir. 2015).

⁸⁴ U.S.S.G. §2K2.4(b), (c).

⁸⁵ U.S.S.G. §4B1.1(c).

⁸⁶ U.S.S.G. §§4B1.1(c), 4B1.2(b), (c); United States v. McFalls, 592 F.3d 707, 712-17 (6th Cir. 2010).

⁸⁷ U.S.S.G §4B1.1(a), (c)(1), (c)(3); United States v. Shabazz, 564 F.3d 280, 288-89 (3d Cir. 2009).

⁸⁸ U.S.S.G §4B1.1(a), (c)(2), (c)(3).

The defendant is convicted of one count of violating 18 U.S.C. § 924(c) for possessing a firearm in furtherance of a drug trafficking offense (5 year mandatory minimum), and one count of violating 21 U.S.C. § 841(b)(1)(B) [(e.g., trafficking in 5-50 grams of crack cocaine)] (5 year mandatory minimum, 40 year statutory maximum). Applying subsection (c)(2)(A), the court determines that the drug count (without regard to the 18 U.S.C. § 924(c) count) qualifies the defendant as a career offender under §4B1.1(a). Under §4B1.1(a), the otherwise applicable guideline range for the drug count is 188-235 months (using offense level 34 (because the statutory maximum for the drug count is 40 years), minus 3 levels for acceptance of responsibility, and criminal history category VI). The court adds 60 months (the minimum required by 18 U.S.C. § 924(c)) to the minimum and the maximum of that range, resulting in a guideline range of 248-295 months. Applying subsection (c)(2)(B) [(the Guideline sentence for conviction of §924(c) alone)], the court then determines the career offender guideline range from the table in subsection (c)(3) is 262-327 months. The range with the greatest minimum, 262-327 months, is used to impose the sentence in accordance with §5G1.2(e). U.S.S.G. §4B1.1, cmt, app. n.3(E).

After the court has determined the sentencing range under the Guidelines, it determines the defendant's sentence, taking into account the results of the Guidelines' calculation and the other factors referred to 18 U.S.C. 3553(a).⁸⁹ Weighing the §3553(a) factors may lead to a more severe sentence than the Guidelines' recommend given the aggravating circumstances which can attend a firearms offense and its predicate offenses.⁹⁰

Armor Piercing Ammunition

Section 924(c) has a separate provision which outlaws predicate crime-related use, carriage, or possession of armor piercing ammunition.⁹¹ The provision, added in 2005, greatly resembles a ⁸⁹ 18 U.S.C. 3553(a) (“The court shall impose a sentence sufficient, but not greater than necessary, to comply with the purposes set forth in paragraph (2) of this subsection. The court, in determining the particular sentence to be imposed, shall consider - (1) the nature and circumstances of the offense and the history and characteristics of the defendant; (2) the need for the sentence imposed - (A) to reflect the seriousness of the offense, to promote respect for the law, and to provide just punishment for the offense; (B) to afford adequate deterrence to criminal conduct; (C) to protect the public from further crimes of the defendant; and (D) to provide the defendant with needed educational or vocational training, medical care, or other correctional treatment in the most effective manner; (3) the kinds of sentences available; (4) the kinds of sentence and the sentencing range established for - (A) the applicable category of offense committed by the applicable category of defendant as set forth in the guidelines (i) issued by the Sentencing Commission pursuant to section 994(a)(1) of title 28, United States Code, subject to any amendments made to such guidelines by act of Congress (regardless of whether such amendments have yet to be incorporated by the Sentencing Commission into amendments issued under section 994(p) of title 28); and (ii) that, except as provided in section 3742(g), are in effect on the date the defendant is sentenced; or (B) in the case of a violation of probation or supervised release, the applicable guidelines or policy statements issued by the Sentencing Commission pursuant to section 994(a)(3) of title 28, United States Code, taking into account any amendments made to such guidelines or policy statements by act of Congress (regardless of whether such amendments have yet to be incorporated by the Sentencing Commission into amendments issued under section 994(p) of title 28); (5) any pertinent policy statement - (A) issued by the Sentencing Commission pursuant to section 994(a)(2) of title 28, United States Code, subject to any amendments made to such policy statement by act of Congress (regardless of whether such amendments have yet to be incorporated by the Sentencing Commission into amendments issued under section 994(p) of title 28); and (B) that, except as provided in section 3742(g), is in effect on the date the defendant is sentenced. (6) the need to avoid unwarranted sentence disparities among defendants with similar records who have been found guilty of similar conduct; and (7) the need to provide restitution to any victims of the offense”).

⁹⁰ E.g., United States v. Fernandez-Garay, 788 F.3d 1, 6 (1st Cir. 2015) (“In this instance, the mandatory minimum sentence -60 months- is the guidelines sentence. The district court’s decision to vary sharply upward and double the mandatory minimum represents a significant adjustment—but the court’s stated justification seems equally significant ... [T]he defendant, masked, instigated a police chase; brandished a high-firepower weapon that he pointed at an officer; and set himself up to provide one-stop shopping for drug purchasers”).

⁹¹ 18 U.S.C. 924(c)(5) (“Except to the extent that a greater minimum sentence is otherwise provided under this (continued...)”).

pre-existing provision in 18 U.S.C. 929.⁹² There are two significant differences. Section 924(c)(5) carries a 15-year mandatory minimum with special provisions if a death results from the commission of the offense. Section 929 carries a five-year mandatory minimum with no mention of death-resulting offenses. Yet §929 specifically excludes the possibility of probation or concurrent sentencing, while §924(c)(5) makes no mention of either. Neither provision appears to have been prosecuted with any regularity.

Constitutional Considerations

Defendants have challenged the constitutionality of §924(c) and its application on a number of grounds including contentions that (1) the section is inconsistent with the Second Amendment’s right to bear arms; (2) the sentence imposed constituted a cruel and unusual punishment in violation of the Eighth Amendment; (3) the procedure used to implement its provisions was contrary to the Sixth Amendment right to trial by jury, and to the Fifth Amendment right to grand jury indictment; (4) imposition of the sanctions violated the prohibition against double jeopardy; (5) Congress lacked the legislative authority to enact the section; (6) mandatory minimums intrude upon the judicial authority of federal judges in a manner contrary to the separation powers; and (7) the equal protection component of the Fifth Amendment’s Due Process Clause does not permit higher mandatory minimums for repeat offenders than for first time offenders.

Second Amendment

A well regulated Militia, being necessary to the security of a free State, the right of the people to keep and bear Arms, shall not be infringed.⁹³

The Supreme Court has explained that the Second Amendment confers an individual right to possess and carry weapons for the defense of his or her person, family, and home.⁹⁴ The Court has subsection, or by any other provision of law, any person who, during and in relation to any crime of violence or drug trafficking crime (including a crime of violence or drug trafficking crime that provides for an enhanced punishment if committed by the use of a deadly or dangerous weapon or device) for which the person may be prosecuted in a court of the United States, uses or carries armor piercing ammunition, or who, in furtherance of any such crime, possesses armor piercing ammunition, shall, in addition to the punishment provided for such crime of violence or drug trafficking crime or conviction under this section - (A) be sentenced to a term of imprisonment of not less than 15 years; and (B) if death results from the use of such ammunition - (i) if the killing is murder (as defined in section 1111), be punished by death or sentenced to a term of imprisonment for any term of years or for life; and (ii) if the killing is manslaughter (as defined in section 1112), be punished as provided in section 1112”).

(...continued)

⁹² 18 U.S.C. 929(“(a)(1) Whoever, during and in relation to the commission of a crime of violence or drug trafficking crime (including a crime of violence or drug trafficking crime which provides for an enhanced punishment if committed by the use of a deadly or dangerous weapon or device) for which he may be prosecuted in a court of the United States, uses or carries a firearm and is in possession of armor piercing ammunition capable of being fired in that firearm, shall, in addition to the punishment provided for the commission of such crime of violence or drug trafficking crime be sentenced to a term of imprisonment for not less than five years. (2) For purposes of this subsection, the term “drug trafficking crime” means any felony punishable under the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 801 et seq.), the Controlled Substances Import and Export Act (21 U.S.C. 951 et seq.), or chapter 705 of title 46.

“(b) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the court shall not suspend the sentence of any person convicted of a violation of this section, nor place the person on probation, nor shall the terms of imprisonment run concurrently with any other terms of imprisonment, including that imposed for the crime in which the armor piercing ammunition was used or possessed”).

⁹³ U.S. Const. Amend. II.

⁹⁴ District of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570, 628-29 (2008)(internal citations omitted)(“The inherent right of self-defense has been central to the Second Amendment right.... [Moreover,] [u]nder any of the standards of scrutiny that (continued...)

been quick to point out, however, that the right is not absolute. Without providing a full panoply of exceptions, it observed that the amendment permits such things as “longstanding prohibitions on the possession of firearms by felons and the mentally ill, [and] laws forbidding the carrying of firearms in sensitive places such as schools and government buildings, [and] laws imposing conditions and qualifications on the commercial sale of arms.”⁹⁵ Consistent with this theme, the circuit courts have held that the Second Amendment cast no constitutional doubt upon §924(c).⁹⁶

Cruel and Unusual Punishment

The Eighth Amendment provides in its entirety that “[e]xcessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual punishments inflicted,” U.S. Const. Amend. VIII. Until recently, there has been little consensus among the justices of the Supreme Court regarding the most appropriate test to determine whether punishment in a noncapital case is cruel and unusual. That seems to have changed with Graham v. Florida,⁹⁷ when a majority of the court referred to one test for “length of term-of-years” cases and another for “categorical cases.”

Contemporary Eighth Amendment jurisprudence begins with Furman v. Georgia.⁹⁸ There, a divided Supreme Court held that the Eighth Amendment, applicable to the states through the Fourteenth Amendment, precluded imposition of the death penalty under the procedures then common in most jurisdictions.⁹⁹ Thereafter, the Court’s treatment of Eighth Amendment questions followed two paths—one for capital punishment cases and another for imprisonment cases. In the first of the imprisonment cases, Rummel v. Estelle, the Court rejected an Eighth Amendment challenge from a prisoner who had been sentenced under a state repeat offender statute to life imprisonment for the fraudulent use of the credit card.¹⁰⁰ Yet three years later in Solem v. Helm, the Court found contrary to Eighth Amendment proscriptions a state repeat offender statute which carried a mandatory term of life imprisonment.¹⁰¹ The Court considered Helm’s punishment far more severe than Rummel’s, because Helm was ineligible for parole while Rummel would have been eligible in 12 years.¹⁰²

(...continued)

we have applied to enumerated constitutional rights, banning from the home [a handgun,] the most preferred firearm in the nation to keep and use for protection of one’s home and family, would fail constitutional muster”); see also, McDonald v. City of Chicago, 561 U.S. 742, 780 (2010)(“[T]he Second Amendment protects a personal right to keep and bear arms for lawful purposes, most notably for self-defense within the home”).

⁹⁵ District of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. at 626-27.

⁹⁶ United States v. Napolitan, 762 F.3d 297, 311 (3d Cir. 2014), quoting, District of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. at 635 (“Needless to say, while the Second Amendment secures ‘the right of law-abiding, responsible citizens to use arms in defense of hearth and home,’ it does not entitle a drug trafficker to carry a firearm in furtherance of his criminal exploits”); United States v. Bryant, 711 F.3d 364, 368-70 (2d Cir. 2013), citing in accord, United States v. Potter, 630 F.3d 1260, 1261 (9th Cir. 2011) and United States v. Jackson, 555 F.3d 635, 636 (7th Cir. 2009).

⁹⁷ 560 U.S. 48 (2010).

⁹⁸ 408 U.S. 238 (1972).

⁹⁹ Each of the nine Justices wrote a separate opinion in Furman, six offering various reasons for support of the per curiam opinion for the Court and three in dissent.

¹⁰⁰ 445 U.S. 263, 265 (1980). Rummel had two earlier theft convictions involving relatively modest amounts, that is, a forged check for $28.36 and a scam involving $120.75; the credit card conviction involved $80 in goods and services, id. at 265-66.

¹⁰¹ 463 U.S. 277, 303 (1983). Helm, convicted for uttering a “no account” check for $100, had six prior “nonviolent” felony convictions, id. at 279-80

¹⁰² Id. at 303.

The Court in Solem identified three factors to be considered in the Eighth Amendment assessment of punishment in a noncapital case: “(i) the gravity of the offense and the harshness of the penalty; (ii) the sentences imposed on the criminals in the same jurisdiction [for other crimes]; and (iii) the sentences imposed for commission of the same crime in other jurisdictions.”¹⁰³

Then in Harmelin v. Michigan, a splintered Court rejected the Eighth Amendment challenge of a first time offender who had been sentenced to life imprisonment without parole following conviction on serious drug charges.¹⁰⁴ Two distinct theories converged to form the judgment of the Court. Two members of the Court, Justice Scalia and Chief Justice Rehnquist, rejected Harmelin’s argument that his sentence was disproportionate to his crime because they saw no proportionality requirement in the Eighth Amendment noncapital cases.¹⁰⁵ Three others, Justices Kennedy, O’Connor, and Souter, found the gravity of Harmelin’s offense sufficient to satisfy the first factor of the Solem test and to dispense with the need to consider the other factors.¹⁰⁶

The Court remained divided when it took up the next Eighth Amendment challenge to recidivist sentencing in Ewing v. California.¹⁰⁷ Three members of the Court, Chief Justice Rehnquist and Justices Kennedy and O’Connor, concluded that a sentence of imprisonment of from 25 years to life for a three-time offender convicted of theft was not unconstitutionally disproportionate.¹⁰⁸ Two others, Justices Scalia and Thomas, concurred in the judgment because neither believed that the Eighth Amendment proscribes disproportionate sentences.¹⁰⁹

Proportionality is balance: the severity of the punishment weighted against gravity of the offense. Justice O’Connor’s Ewing opinion indicates that certain of a defendant’s individual circumstances, his criminal record for instance, enhance gravity of the offense. Other cases hold out the possibility that other individualistic circumstances, such as the defendant’s mental capacity or maturity, may enhance the severity of the punishment. These cases also have their origin in the death penalty cases.

The first of these, Atkins v. Virginia, held that the Eighth Amendment barred execution of a mentally retarded defendant.¹¹⁰ In the years leading up to Atkins, a substantial number of state legislatures in capital punishment states had banned execution of the mentally retarded.¹¹¹ Elsewhere, though permitted in law, the practice has been abandoned in fact.¹¹² This, coupled with the fact that a want of defendant capacity undermines the normal expectations and justifications of the criminal justice system, marked execution of the mentally retarded as an Eighth Amendment impermissible excessive punishment.¹¹³

¹⁰³ Id. at 292.

¹⁰⁴ 501 U.S. 957 (1991).

¹⁰⁵ Id. at 994.

¹⁰⁶ Id. at 1004.

¹⁰⁷ 538 U.S. 11 (2003).

¹⁰⁸ Id. at 30-31.

¹⁰⁹ Id. at 31, 32.

¹¹⁰ 536 U.S. 304, 321 (2002).

¹¹¹ Id. at 314-15.

¹¹² Id. at 315-16.

¹¹³ Id. at 321 (“Construing and applying the Eighth Amendment in the light of our ‘evolving standards of decency,’ we therefore conclude that such punishment is excessive and that the Constitution ‘places a substantial restriction on the State’s power to take the life’ of a mentally retarded offender”).

For much the same reason, the Court shortly thereafter in Roper v. Simmons declared that the Eighth Amendment prohibited imposing the death penalty for a crime committed as a juvenile.¹¹⁴ Next, the Court carried the Atkins-Roper line of cases beyond the capital punishment realm. In Graham v. Florida, Justice Kennedy explained that “[t]he Court’s cases addressing the proportionality of sentences fall within two general classifications. The first involves challenges to the length of term-of-years sentences given all the circumstances of a particular case. The second comprises cases in which the Court implements the proportionality standard by certain categorical restrictions on the death penalty.”¹¹⁵ In the first line of cases, the Solem-Harmelin-Ewing line, the Court employs a proportionality standard, and “it has been difficult for the challenger to establish a lack of proportionality.”¹¹⁶

In the second line of cases, the Atkins-Roper line, Graham recognized a two-step approach used when the challenge is based on a characteristic of the defendant, such as his mental capacity as in Atkins or his age as in Roper.¹¹⁷ First, the Court “considers ‘objective indicia of society’s standards, as expressed in legislative enactments and state practice’ to determine whether there is a national consensus against the sentencing practice at issue.”¹¹⁸ Second, “guided by ‘the standards elaborated by controlling precedents and by the Court’s own understanding and interpretation of the Eighth Amendment’s text, history, meaning, and purpose,’ the Court must determine in the exercise of its own independent judgment whether the punishment in question violates the Constitution.”¹¹⁹

Graham challenged his sentence of life imprisonment without the possibility of parole imposed for the commission of a nonhomicide, armed robbery, committed while a child. Using this Atkins-Roper approach, the Court concluded that the Eighth Amendment precluded Graham’s sentence. It carried that logic forward in Miller v. Alabama.¹²⁰ The Miller defendants had been convicted of capital murder committed while juveniles and had been sentenced to life imprisonment without the possibility of parole.¹²¹ That the Eighth Amendment does not permit, the Court held.¹²² The Miller sentencing procedures suffered from two previously identified constitutional defects. First, they barred consideration of the mitigating impact of the defendant’s age:

By removing youth from the balance—by subjecting a juvenile to the same life-without-parole sentence applicable to an adult—these laws prohibit a sentencing authority from assessing whether the law’s harshest term of imprisonment proportionately punishes a juvenile offender. That contravenes Graham’s (also Roper’s) foundational principle: that imposition of a State’s most severe penalties on juvenile offenders cannot proceed as though they were not children.¹²³

Second, the procedure not only failed to account for a paramount culpability-reducing factor, but it also failed to account for the severity of the sentence when imposed upon a child:

¹¹⁴ 543 U.S. 551, 564-78.

¹¹⁵ 560 U.S. 48, 59 (2010).

¹¹⁶ Id.

¹¹⁷ Id. at 60.

¹¹⁸ Id. at 61.

¹¹⁹ Id.

¹²⁰ 132 S.Ct. 2455 (2012).

¹²¹ Id. at 2461-462.

¹²² Id. at 2476.

¹²³ Id. at 2466.

Graham makes plain these mandatory schemes' defects in another way: by likening life-without-parole sentences imposed on juveniles to the death penalty itself. Life-without-parole terms, the Court wrote, share some characteristics with death sentences that are shared by no other sentences. Imprisoning an offender until he dies alters the remainder of his life by a forfeiture that is irrevocable. And this lengthiest possible incarceration is an especially harsh punishment for a juvenile because he will almost inevitably serve more years and a greater percentage of his life in prison than an adult offender. The penalty when imposed on a teenager, as compared with an older person, is therefore the same in name only. All of that suggested a distinctive set of legal rules: In part because we viewed this ultimate penalty for juveniles as akin to the death penalty, we treated it similarly to that most severe punishment.¹²⁴

Thus, under the current state of the law, the Eighth Amendment bars imposition of a mandatory life term of imprisonment upon juveniles and most likely a particular term of imprisonment in those exceptionally rare cases when the punishment is grossly disproportionate to the offense.

Given the seriousness of §924(c) offenses, it is perhaps not surprising that the courts have rejected Eighth Amendment challenges even in the face of exceptionally long sentences.¹²⁵

Juries, Grand Juries, and Due Process

The Constitution demands that no person “be held to answer for a capital or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a grand jury,” and that “[i]n all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial, by an impartial jury.”¹²⁶ Moreover, due process requires that the prosecution prove beyond a reasonable doubt “every fact necessary to constitute the crime” with which an accused is charged, In re Winship.¹²⁷ After Winship, the question arose whether a statute might authorize or require a more severe penalty for a particular crime based on a fact—not included in the indictment, not found by the jury, and not proven beyond a reasonable doubt. Pennsylvania passed a law under which various serious crimes (rape, robbery, kidnapping, and the like) were subject to a mandatory minimum penalty of imprisonment for five years, if the judge after conviction found by a preponderance of the evidence that the defendant had been in visible possession of a firearm during the commission of the offense.¹²⁸ Had the Pennsylvania statute created a new series of crimes? For example, had it ¹²⁴ Id. (internal citations and quotation marks omitted).

¹²⁵ E.g., United States v. Richardson, 793 F.3d 612, 633 (6th Cir. 2015) (“We have regularly upheld sentences exceeding 1,494 months for §924(c) violations related to armed robberies.... Despite acknowledging that the Eighth Amendment places an outer limit on criminal penalties that are grossly disproportionate to the offense, we conclude that due to the numerosity and seriousness of the offenses, the comparable sentences imposed by this circuit in similar circumstances, that the requirement that sentences for §924(c) firearms convictions run consecutively to all other sentences, the defendant’s sentence was not grossly disproportionate to the offenses”); United States v. Haile, 685 F.3d 1211, 1222 (11th Cir. 2012) (“Given the serious nature of possessing a machine gun in furtherance of drug-trafficking crimes, Beckford’s 30-year statutory mandatory minimum sentence imposed under §924(c)(1)(B)(ii) is not grossly disproportionate to the offense”); United States v. Major, 676 F.3d 803, 812 (9th Cir. 2012) (“In United States v. Harris, 154 F.3d 1082, 1084 (9th Cir. 1990), we upheld a 95-year sentence under section 924(c) against an Eighth Amendment challenge.... No one could dispute that a sentence of almost 750 years is harsh. But there is no difference in principle between their sentences and the 95-year sentence we upheld in Harris”); United States v. Thomas, 627 F.3d 146, 160 (5th Cir. 2010) (“The 1,284-month portion of the sentence he challenges is based on the five convictions for use of a firearm during a crime of violence. The sentences assessed for these five convictions were all mandatory minimums; the last four were 25-year mandatory minimums assigned to repeat weapons offenders.... Hodges’ sentence does not constitute cruel and unusual punishment in violation of the Eighth Amendment”).

¹²⁶ U.S.Const. Amends. V, VI.

¹²⁷ 397 U.S. 358, 364 (1970).

¹²⁸ 42 Pa.Cons.Stat. 9712 (1982), reprinted in McMillan v. Pennsylvania, 477 U.S. 79, 81-2 n.1 (1986).

supplemented its crime of rape with a new crime of rape while in visible possession of a firearm? And if so, did the fact of visible possession have to be proven to the jury beyond a reasonable doubt?¹²⁹

The Supreme Court concluded that visible possession of a firearm under the statute was not an element of a new series of crimes, but was instead a sentencing consideration that had been given a legislatively prescribed weight.¹³⁰ As such, the Pennsylvania statutory scheme neither offended due process nor triggered any right to a separate jury finding.¹³¹

There followed a number of state and federal statutes under which facts that might earlier have been treated as elements of a new crime were simply classified as sentencing factors. In some instances, the new sentencing factor permitted imposition of a penalty far in excess of that otherwise available for the underlying offense. For instance, the Supreme Court found no constitutional defect in a statute which punished a deported alien for returning to the United States by imprisonment for not more than two years, but which permitted the alien to be sentenced to imprisonment for not more than 20 years upon a post-trial, judicial determination that the alien had been convicted of a serious crime following deportation.¹³²

Perhaps uneasy with the implications, the Court soon made it clear that “under the Due Process Clause of the Fifth Amendment and the notice and jury trial guarantees of the Sixth Amendment, any fact (other than prior conviction) that increases the maximum penalty for a crime must be charged in an indictment, submitted to a jury, and proven beyond a reasonable doubt,” Apprendi v. New Jersey.¹³³ Side opinions questioned the continued vitality of McMillan’s mandatory minimum determination in light of the Apprendi.¹³⁴

¹²⁹ The right to grand jury indictment was not implicated since the Sixth Amendment right to grand jury indictment applies only to federal prosecutions, Alexander v. Louisiana, 405 U.S. 625, 633 (1972).

¹³⁰ McMillan v. Pennsylvania, 477 U.S. 79 (1986).

¹³¹ Id. at 84, 93.

¹³² Almendarez-Torres v. United States, 523 U.S. 224, 247 (1998).

¹³³ 530 U.S. 466, 476 (2000)(emphasis added).

¹³⁴ “Thus, the Court appears to hold that any fact that increases or alters the range of penalties to which a defendant is exposed—which, by definition, must include increases or alterations to either the minimum or maximum penalties—must be proved to a jury beyond a reasonable doubt. In McMillan, however, we rejected such a rule to the extent it concerned those facts that increase or alter the minimum penalty to which a defendant is exposed. Accordingly, it is incumbent on the Court not only to admit that it is overruling McMillan, but also to explain why such a course of action is appropriate under normal principles of stare decisis,” 530 U.S. at 533 (O’Connor, with Kennedy, Breyer, JJ., and Rehnquist, Ch.J., dissenting).

“[T]his traditional understanding—that a crime includes every fact that is by law a basis for imposing or increasing punishment—continued well into the 20th century, at least until the middle of the century.... I think it clear that the common-law rule would cover the McMillan situation of a mandatory minimum sentence.... [A defendant’s] expected punishment has increased as a result of the narrowed range and that the prosecution is empowered, by invoking the mandatory minimum, to require the judge to impose a higher punishment than he might wish. The mandatory minimum entitles the government to more than it would otherwise be entitled.... Thus, the fact triggering the mandatory minimum is part of the punishment sought to be inflicted; it undoubtedly enters into the punishment so as to aggravate it, and is an act to which the law affixes punishment. Further ... it is likely that the change in the range available to the judge affects his choice of sentences. Finally, in numerous cases ... the aggravating fact raised the whole range—both the top and bottom. Those courts, in holding that such a fact was an element, did not bother with any distinction between changes in the maximum and the minimum. What mattered was simply the overall increase in the punishment provided by law,” 530 U.S. at 518, 521-22 (Thomas, J., concurring); see also, Rethinking Mandatory Minimums After Apprendi, 96 NORTHWESTERN UNIVERSITY LAW REVIEW 811 (2002); Levine, The Confounding Boundaries of “Apprendi-land”: Statutory Minimums and the Federal Sentencing Guidelines, 29 AMERICAN JOURNAL OF CRIMINAL LAW 377 (2002).

Initially unwilling to extend Apprendi to mandatory minimums in Harris,¹³⁵ the Court did so in Alleyne v. United States.¹³⁶ Alleyne was convicted under the statute that imposes a series of mandatory minimum penalties upon defendants who carry a firearm during and in furtherance of a crime of violence (5 years for carrying; 7 years for brandishing; 10 years for discharging).¹³⁷ The jury found him guilty of carrying; the court concluded the gun had been brandished.¹³⁸ The Sixth Amendment requires that the question of brandishing had to be found by the jury, the Court declared:

Harris drew a distinction between facts that increase the statutory maximum and facts that increase only the mandatory minimum. We conclude that this distinction is inconsistent with our decision in Apprendi and with the original meaning of the Sixth Amendment. Any fact that, by law, increases the penalty for a crime is an element that must be submitted to the jury and found beyond a reasonable doubt. Mandatory minimum sentences increase the penalty for a crime. It follows, then, that any fact that increases the mandatory minimum is an element that must be submitted to the jury.¹³⁹

¹³⁵ Harris v. United States, 536 U.S. 545, 568 (2002) (“Reaffirming McMillan and employing the approach outlined in that case, we conclude that the federal provision at issue, 18 U.S.C. §924(c)(1)(A) (ii), is constitutional. Basing a 2-year increase in the defendant’s minimum sentence on a judicial finding of brandishing does not evade the requirements of the Fifth and Sixth Amendments. Congress ‘simply took one factor that has always been considered by sentencing courts to bear on punishment ... and dictated the precise weight to be given that factor.’ McMillan, 477 U.S. at 89-90. That factor need not be alleged in the indictment, submitted to the jury, or proved beyond a reasonable doubt”).

Of course, Harris was not meant to serve as either an endorsement or condemnation of mandatory minimum sentencing as such: “The Court is well aware that many question the wisdom of mandatory minimum sentencing. Mandatory minimums, it is often said, fail to account for the unique circumstances of offenders who warrant a lesser penalty. These criticisms may be sound, but they would persist whether the judge or the jury found the facts given rise to the minimum,” 530 U.S. at 568. See also, 530 U.S. at 570-71 (Breyer, J., concurring in part and concurring in the judgment): “I do not mean to suggest my approval of mandatory minimum sentences as a matter of policy. During the past two decades, as mandatory minimum sentencing statutes have proliferated in number and importance, judges, legislators, lawyers, and commentators have criticized those statutes, arguing that they negatively affect the fair administration of the criminal law, a matter concern to judge and legislators alike.”

“Mandatory minimum statutes are fundamentally inconsistent with Congress’ simultaneous effort to create a fair, honest, and rational sentencing system through the use of Sentencing Guidelines. Unlike Guideline sentences, statutory mandatory minimums generally deny the judge the legal power to depart downward, no matter how unusual the special circumstances that call for leniency. They rarely reflect an effort to achieve sentencing proportionality—a key element of sentencing fairness that demands that the law punish a drug ‘kingpin’ and a ‘mule’ differently. They transfer sentencing power to prosecutors, who can determine sentences through the charges they decide to bring, and who thereby have reintroduced much of the sentencing disparity that Congress created Guidelines to eliminate. They rarely are based upon empirical study. And there is evidence that they encourage subterfuge leading to more frequent downward departures (on a random basis), thereby making them comparatively ineffective means of guaranteeing tough sentences.”

¹³⁶ 133 S.Ct. 2151 (2013).

¹³⁷ 18 U.S.C. 924(c).

¹³⁸ 133 S.Ct. at 2156.

¹³⁹ Id. at 2155 (internal citations and quotation marks omitted). Defendants whose appeals were pending when Alleyne was announced but who had failed to press available Apprendi arguments are at the mercy of the plain error rule (resentencing requires the existence of a plain error that has an impact on the defendant’s substantive rights and the presence of a miscarriage of justice should the error not be corrected), see, e.g., United States v. Kirklin, 727 F.3d 711, 716-17 (7th Cir. 2013)(no miscarriage of justice given the overwhelming evidence); United States v. Yancy, 725 F.3d 596, 601-603 (6th Cir. 2013)(defendant who pled guilty could show no Apprendi error); United States v. Lara-Ruiz, 721 F.3d 554, 557-60 (8th Cir. 2013)(remand and resentencing required for plain error).

The Almendarez exception, however, remains in effect. A defendant's prior conviction, which triggers one of §924(c)'s enhanced mandatory minimum sentences, need not be charged in the indictment, nor presented to the jury, nor found beyond a reasonable doubt.¹⁴⁰

Neither the Sixth Amendment, Apprendi, nor Alleyne limits Congress's authority to establish mandatory minimum sentences nor limits the authority of the courts to impose them. They simply dictate the procedural safeguards that must accompany the exercise of that authority.

Double Jeopardy

The Fifth Amendment declares that "No person shall be ... subject for the same offence to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb...."¹⁴¹ The double jeopardy clause protects against both successive prosecutions and successive punishments for the same offense.¹⁴² The initial test for whether a defendant has been twice tried or punished for the same offense or two different offenses is whether each of the two purported offenses requires proof that the other does not.¹⁴³ Thus, without violating the double jeopardy clause, an individual may be convicted and sentenced for two violations of §924(c), if each has a different predicate offense.¹⁴⁴ On the other hand, there may be some dispute over whether a single use of a firearm, associated with more than one predicate offense, may provide the basis for multiple §924(c) charges. For example, if a defendant fires a gun, wounding one victim and killing another, may he be charged with two violations of §924(c) for the single shot? Most, but perhaps not all, say no.¹⁴⁵

Conviction for a serious offense will ordinarily preclude prosecution or punishment for a lesser included offense, since the lesser offense consists of only elements found in the more serious offense.¹⁴⁶ Consequently, a defendant may not be convicted and punished for both a violation of ¹⁴⁰ United States v. Smith, 774 F.3d 1262, 1265-66 (11th Cir. 2014); United States v. Hunter, 770 F.3d 740, 745-46 (8th Cir. 2014).

¹⁴¹ U.S. Const. Amend. V.

¹⁴² United States v. Dixon, 509 U.S. 688, 696 (1993); United States v. Cejas, 761 F.3d 717, 730 (7th Cir. 2014); United States v. Mahdi, 598 F.3d 883, 887 (D.C.Cir. 2010); United States v. Hall, 551 F.3d 257, 266 (4th Cir. 2009).

¹⁴³ Blockburger v. United States, 284 U.S. 299, 304 (1932); United States v. Rentz, 777 F.3d 1105, 1119 (10th Cir. 2015); United States v. Angilau, 717 F.3d 781, 787 (10th Cir. 2013); United States v. Mahdi, 598 F.3d at 888; United States v. Sandstrom, 594 F.3d 634, 654 (8th Cir. 2010); United States v. Beltran-Moreno, 556 F.3d 913, 916 (9th Cir. 2009).

¹⁴⁴ United States v. Cejas, 761 F.3d 717, 730-31; United States v. Ford, 761 F.3d 641, 656-57 (6th Cir. 2014); United States v. Angilau, 717 F.3d at 781, 788-89; United States v. Kennedy, 682 F.3d 244, 257 (3d Cir. 2012); United States v. Sandstrom, 594 F.3d at 658; United States v. Catalan-Roman, 585 F.3d 453, 472 (1st Cir. 2009); United States v. Looney, 532 F.3d 392, 396 (5th Cir. 2008).

¹⁴⁵ United States v. Rentz, 777 F.3d at 1107, 1115 (10th Cir. 2015) ("The parties before us agree that Philbert Rentz 'used' a gun only once but did not 'during and in relation' two separate 'crimes of violence'—by firing a single shot that hit and injured one victim but then managed to strike and kill another. In circumstances like these, does this statute permit the government to charge one violation or two? ... Throughout this appeal both sides have proceeded on the premise that this case involves only one use, carry, or possession of a firearm. That much is shared ground. And to know that much is to know the government may seek and obtain no more than one §924(c)(1)(A) conviction"); comparing, United States v. Wilson, 160 F.3d 732, 748-49 (D.C.Cir. 1998); United States v. Finley, 245 F.3d 199, 206-208 (2d Cir. 2001); United States v. Phipps, 319 F.3d 177, 186-89 (5th Cir. 2003); United States v. Cureton, 739 F.3d 1032, 1043 (7th Cir. 2014), with, United States v. Sandstrom, 594 F.3d at 656-59 (8th Cir. 2010).

¹⁴⁶ Rutledge v. United States, 517 U.S. 292, 306-307 (1996); United States v. Sandstrom, 594 F.3d at 654; United States v. Catalan-Roman, 585 F.3d 453, 472 (1st Cir. 2009).

§924(c)(use of a firearm in furtherance of a robbery) and of §924(j)(use of the same firearm in the same robbery resulting in death).¹⁴⁷

Commerce Clause Authority

The Constitution gives Congress the power to regulate commerce among the states and between the United States and other nations.¹⁴⁸ It also bestows on Congress the authority to enact such legislation as it considered necessary and proper to carry into execution those other powers which the Constitution vests in Congress, the Government of the United States, or any of its Departments or officers.¹⁴⁹ At the same time, the Constitution reserves to the states and the people those powers which it has not otherwise conveyed.¹⁵⁰ On occasion, the Supreme Court has held that a particular statute was too far removed from Congress's commerce clause power to make the statute constitutionally viable.¹⁵¹ Defendants have sometimes seized upon these cases to assert that §924(c) lies beyond Congress's legislative reach. The courts have yet to be convinced.¹⁵²

Separation of Powers

While “it remains a basic principle of our constitutional scheme that one branch of the Government may not intrude upon the central prerogatives of another,”¹⁵³ the Supreme Court has observed that “Congress has the power to define criminal punishments without giving the courts any sentencing discretion.”¹⁵⁴ Thus, the lower federal courts have regularly upheld mandatory minimum statutes when challenged on separation of powers grounds,¹⁵⁵ and the Supreme Court has denied any separation of powers infirmity in the federal sentencing guideline system which at the time might have been thought to produce its own form of mandatory minimums.¹⁵⁶

¹⁴⁷ United States v. Catalan-Roman, 585 F.3d at 472. 18 U.S.C. 924(j) provides: “A person who, in the course of a violation of subsection (c), causes the death of a person through the use of a firearm, shall- (1) if the killing is a murder (as defined in section 1111), be punished by death or by imprisonment for any term of years or for life; and (2) if the killing is manslaughter (as defined in section 1112), be punished as provided in that section.” Violations of 18 U.S.C. 1112 are punishable by imprisonment either for not more than 15 years (voluntary manslaughter) or not more than 8 years (involuntary manslaughter).

¹⁴⁸ U.S. Const. Art. I, §8, cl. 3.

¹⁴⁹ U.S. Const. Art. I, §8, ch. 18.

¹⁵⁰ U.S. Const. Amend. X.

¹⁵¹ United States v. Morrison, 529 U.S. 598, 612-13 (2000), quoting United States v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549, 564 (1995) (“We rejected these ... arguments because they would permit Congress to ‘regulate not only all violent crime, but all activities that might lead to violent crime, regardless of how tenuously they related to interstate commerce’”); but consider, United States v. Comstock, 560 U.S. 126, 149 (2010) (“[T]he statute [at issue] is a ‘necessary and proper’ means of exercising the federal authority that permits Congress to create federal criminal laws, to punish their violation, to imprison violators, to provide appropriately for those imprisoned, and to maintain the security of those who are not imprisoned but who may be affected by the federal imprisonment of others”).

¹⁵² United States v. Belfast, 611 F.3d 783, 815 (11th Cir. 2010); United States v. Lynch, 367 F.3d 1148, 1158 (9th Cir. 2004); United States v. Miller, 283 F.3d 907, 913-14 (8th Cir. 2002).

¹⁵³ Loving v. United States, 517 U.S. 748, 757 (1996).

¹⁵⁴ United States v. Chapman, 500 U.S. 453, 467 (1991).

¹⁵⁵ United States v. Richardson, 793 F.3d 612, 632 (6th Cir. 2015); United States v. Major, 676 F.3d 803, 811 (9th Cir. 2012); United States v. Walker, 473 F.3d 761, 765-66 (3d Cir. 2007); United States v. Khan, 461 F.3d 477, 495 n.12 (4th Cir. 2006).

¹⁵⁶ Mistretta v. United States, 488 U.S. 361 (1989). Mistretta, sentenced under the guidelines to 18 months' imprisonment for conspiracy to distribute cocaine, argued that the guidelines constituted an unconstitutional delegation of Congress's legislative authority and that the service of judges upon the Commission constituted extrajudicial service (continued...)

Due Process

Section 924(c) applies overseas to the extent that there is extraterritorial jurisdiction over the predicate offense.¹⁵⁷ In one such case, the defendant argued that trial in the United States for a crime committed overseas denied him his Sixth Amendment right to compulsory attendance of witnesses and consequently his Fifth Amendment right.¹⁵⁸ The contention failed in part because the defendant sought witnesses to support a defense of duress which the court considered neither credible nor a complete defense to the murders with which the defendant was charged.¹⁵⁹

In cases involving other offenses, defendants in extraterritorial cases more often claim that due process requires a nexus between the United States and the overseas crimes for which they are prosecuted in the United States.¹⁶⁰ Not every federal appellate court recognizes a due process limitation on the exercise of extraterritorial jurisdiction, and those that do often speak of it in different terms.¹⁶¹

Equal Protection

The Fifth Amendment's Due Process Clause has an equal protection component that corresponds to the Fourteenth Amendment's Equal Protection Clause.¹⁶² At least one defendant sentenced under §924(c) has argued that imposing a 25-year mandatory minimum sentence upon repeat offenders while imposing a 5-year mandatory minimum sentence upon first-time offenders at odds with the separation of powers doctrine. The Court rejected both arguments, concluding “that in creating the Sentencing Commission ... Congress neither delegated excessive legislative power nor upset the constitutionally mandated balance of powers among the coordinate Branches,” 488 U.S. at 412.

(...continued)

¹⁵⁷ United States v. Shibin, 722 F.3d 233, 246-47 (4th Cir. 2013); United States v. Belfast, 611 F.3d 783, 813-15 (11th Cir. 2010); cf., United States v. Beyle, 782 F.3d 159 (4th Cir. 2015).

¹⁵⁸ United States v. Beyle, 782 F.3d at 169-70 (4th Cir. 2015).

¹⁵⁹ Id. at 173.

¹⁶⁰ United States v. Ballestas, 795 F.3d 138, 147-48 (D.C.Cir. 2015) (“Our circuit has yet to decide whether the Constitution limits the extraterritorial exercise of federal criminal jurisdiction. Several other courts of appeals, though, have found that the Due Process Clause imposes limits on the extraterritorial application of federal criminal laws. Those courts generally require a showing of sufficient nexus between the defendant and the United States, so that application of the law would not be arbitrary or fundamentally unfair”), citing, United States v. Brehm, 691 F.3d 547, 552-54 (4th Cir. 2012); United States v. Ibarquen-Mosquera, 634 F.3d 1370, 1378-79 (11th Cir. 2011); see also, United States v. Yousef, 750 F.3d 254, 262 (2d Cir. 2014); United States v. Lawrence, 727 F.3d 386, 396 (5th Cir. 2013); United States v. Shi, 525 F.3d 709, 722 (9th Cir. 2008).

¹⁶¹ United States v. Ballestas, 795 F.3d at 147 (“Our circuit has yet to decide whether the Constitution limits the extraterritorial exercise of criminal jurisdiction”); United States v. Yousef, 750 F.3d at 260 (“[W]e cannot agree that the absence of a territorial nexus between the defendant’s alleged conduct and the United States implicates the authority of a court to decide a case presented by an otherwise valid criminal indictment, where, as here, a nexus requirement is not mentioned anywhere among the elements of the charged offense”); United States v. Lawrence, 727 F.3d 386, 396 (5th Cir. 2013) (“In the context of non-U.S. citizens, due process requires the Government to demonstrate that there exists a sufficient nexus between the conduct condemned and the United States such that application of the statute would not be arbitrary or fundamentally unfair to the defendant”); United States v. Brehm, 691 F.3d at 552 n.7 (“Although we find the analysis of these courts instructive, we need not decide, in this case, whether a showing of sufficient nexus is either adequate or required to satisfy due process in the prosecution of a foreign national in U.S. courts”); United States v. Shi, 525 F.3d at 722 (“The Due Process Clause requires that a defendant prosecuted in the United States should reasonably anticipate being haled into court in this country”); United States v. Perez Oviedo, 281 F.3d 400, 403 (3d Cir. 2002) (“[W]e previously held in Martinez-Hidalgo that no due process violation occurs in an extraterritorial prosecution under MDLEA where there is no nexus between the defendant’s conduct and the United States”).

¹⁶² United States v. Winsor, 133 S.Ct. 2675, 2695 (2013), citing, Bolling v. Sharpe, 347 U.S. 497, 499 (1954) and Adarand Constructors, Inc. v. Peña, 515 U.S. 200, 217-18 (1995).

constitutes unequal treatment and an equal protection violation.¹⁶³ An unequal legislative classification survives an equal protection challenge if it is rationally related to some legitimate governmental purpose, as long as it is not based on race or some other constitutionally suspect basis and is not contrary to some constitutionally protected fundamental interest.¹⁶⁴ In the case of §924(c), the court felt that the accused had failed to rebut the government’s contention that the “sentencing discrepancy between first time offenders and repeat offenders can be justified by the legitimate governmental goal of deterring recidivism.”¹⁶⁵ Proximity to violence and harm would seem to justify the other distinctions found in §924(c), although cases on point have yet to arise.

Sentencing Commission Recommendations

The Sentencing Commission’s report on mandatory minimum sentences suggested several adjustments in §924(c):

i. Amend the length of section 924(c) penalties

Congress should consider amending the mandatory minimum penalties established at section 924(c), particularly the penalties for “second or subsequent” violations of the statute, to lesser terms. Section 924(c), for example, requires a 25-year mandatory minimum penalty for offenders convicted of a “second or subsequent” violation of the statute. Reducing the length of the mandatory minimum penalty would reduce the risk of excessive severity, permit the guidelines to better account for the variety of mitigating and aggravating factors that may be present in the particular case, and mitigate the inconsistencies in application produced by the severity of the existing mandatory minimum penalties.

ii. Make section 924(c) a “true” recidivist statute

Congress should consider amending section 924(c) so that the increased mandatory minimum penalties for a “second or subsequent” offense apply only to prior convictions. In those circumstances, the mandatory minimum penalties for multiple violations of section 924(c) charged in the same indictment would continue to apply consecutively, but would require significantly shorter sentences for offenders who do not have a prior conviction under section 924(c). This would reduce the potential for overly severe sentences for offenders who have not previously been convicted of an offense under section 924(c), and ameliorate some of the demographic impacts resulting from stacking.

iii. Give discretion to impose concurrent sentences for multiple section 924(c) violations

Congress should consider amending section 924(c) to give the sentencing court limited discretion to impose sentences for multiple violations of section 924(c) concurrently. Congress has recently used this approach in enacting the offense of aggravated identity theft and the accompanying mandatory penalty at 18 U.S.C. § 1028A. This limited discretion would provide the flexibility to impose sentences that appropriately reflect the gravity of the offense and reduce the risk that an offender will receive an excessively severe punishment.

iv. Amend statutory definitions

Congress should consider clarifying the statutory definitions of the underlying and predicate offenses that trigger mandatory minimum penalties under section 924(c) and ¹⁶³ United States v. Richardson, 793 F.3d 612, 633(6th Cir. 2015).

¹⁶⁴ Romer v. Evans, 517 U.S. 620, 631 (1996), citing, Heller v. Doe, 509 U.S. 312, 319-20 (1993).

¹⁶⁵ United States v. Richardson, 793 F.3d at 633.

the Armed Career Criminal Act to reduce the risk of inconsistent application and the litigation that those definitions have fostered. To further reduce the risk of inconsistent application, Congress also should consider more finely tailoring the definitions of the predicate offenses that trigger the Armed Career Criminal Act’s mandatory minimum penalty.¹⁶⁶

18 U.S.C. 924(c) (Text)

(c)(1)(A) Except to the extent that a greater minimum sentence is otherwise provided by this subsection or by any other provision of law, any person who, during and in relation to any crime of violence or drug trafficking crime (including a crime of violence or drug trafficking crime that provides for an enhanced punishment if committed by the use of a deadly or dangerous weapon or device) for which the person may be prosecuted in a court of the United States, uses or carries a firearm, or who, in furtherance of any such crime, possesses a firearm, shall, in addition to the punishment provided for such crime of violence or drug trafficking crime—

- (i) be sentenced to a term of imprisonment of not less than 5 years;
- (ii) if the firearm is brandished, be sentenced to a term of imprisonment of not less than 7 years; and
- (iii) if the firearm is discharged, be sentenced to a term of imprisonment of not less than 10 years.

(B) If the firearm possessed by a person convicted of a violation of this subsection—

- (i) is a short-barreled rifle, short-barreled shotgun, or semiautomatic assault weapon, the person shall be sentenced to a term of imprisonment of not less than 10 years; or
- (ii) is a machinegun or a destructive device, or is equipped with a firearm silencer or firearm muffler, the person shall be sentenced to a term of imprisonment of not less than 30 years.

(C) In the case of a second or subsequent conviction under this subsection, the person shall—

- (i) be sentenced to a term of imprisonment of not less than 25 years; and
- (ii) if the firearm involved is a machinegun or a destructive device, or is equipped with a firearm silencer or firearm muffler, be sentenced to imprisonment for life.

(D) Notwithstanding any other provision of law—

- (i) a court shall not place on probation any person convicted of a violation of this subsection; and
- (ii) no term of imprisonment imposed on a person under this subsection shall run concurrently with any other term of imprisonment imposed on the person, including any term of imprisonment imposed for the crime of violence or drug trafficking crime during which the firearm was used, carried, or possessed.

(2) For purposes of this subsection, the term “drug trafficking crime” means any felony punishable under the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 801 et seq.), the Controlled Substances Import and Export Act (21 U.S.C. 951 et seq.), or chapter 705 of title 46.

(3) For purposes of this subsection the term “crime of violence” means an offense that is a felony and—

¹⁶⁶ Commission Report II, 364-65.

(A) has as an element the use, attempted use, or threatened use of physical force against the person or property of another, or

(B) that by its nature, involves a substantial risk that physical force against the person or property of another may be used in the course of committing the offense.

(4) For purposes of this subsection, the term “brandish” means, with respect to a firearm, to display all or part of the firearm, or otherwise make the presence of the firearm known to another person, in order to intimidate that person, regardless of whether the firearm is directly visible to that person.

(5) Except to the extent that a greater minimum sentence is otherwise provided under this subsection, or by any other provision of law, any person who, during and in relation to any crime of violence or drug trafficking crime (including a crime of violence or drug trafficking crime that provides for an enhanced punishment if committed by the use of a deadly or dangerous weapon or device) for which the person may be prosecuted in a court of the United States, uses or carries armor piercing ammunition, or who, in furtherance of any such crime, possesses armor piercing ammunition, shall, in addition to the punishment provided for such crime of violence or drug trafficking crime or conviction under this section—

(A) be sentenced to a term of imprisonment of not less than 15 years; and

(B) if death results from the use of such ammunition—

(i) if the killing is murder (as defined in section 1111), be punished by death or sentenced to a term of imprisonment for any term of years or for life; and

(ii) if the killing is manslaughter (as defined in section 1112), be punished as provided in section 1112.

Author Contact Information

Charles Doyle
Senior Specialist in American Public Law
cdoyle@crs.loc.gov, 7-6968