Introduction

Congress has expressed interest in the visa categories by which foreign nationals may enter or be present in the United States. U.S. immigration policy is governed largely by the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA), which was first codified in 1952 and has been amended significantly several times since.<sup>1</sup> The United States has long distinguished temporary immigration from permanent immigration. Temporary immigration occurs through the admission of visitors for specific purposes and limited periods of time, and encompasses two dozen categories (which are commonly referred to by the letter and numeral that denote their subparagraph in the INA).<sup>2</sup> Permanent immigration occurs through family- and employer-sponsored categories, the diversity immigrant visa lottery, and refugee and asylee admissions.

This brief report provides the following information:

- a list of nonimmigrant (i.e., temporary)<sup>3</sup> visa categories and lawful permanent resident (LPR)<sup>4</sup> categories,
- a description of each category,
- the allowed duration of stay in the United States for each nonimmigrant visa category,
- the annual numeric limit (or “cap”) for each nonimmigrant and LPR category, and
- the number of visas that were issued/individuals obtaining LPR status for each category in the most recent year for which data are available.<sup>5</sup>

This information is provided in two tables: Table 1 contains information for nonimmigrant visa categories, and Table 2 contains information for LPR categories.

Table 1. Nonimmigrant Visas, FY2020

Visa Category	Description	Initial Duration of Stay <sup>a</sup>	Annual Numeric Limit	FY2020 Visa Issuances
A-1	Ambassador, public minister, career diplomat, or consul, and immediate family	Duration of assignment	None	7,106
A-2	Other foreign government official or employee, and immediate family	Duration of assignment	None	48,358

<sup>3</sup> Nonimmigrants are foreign nationals lawfully admitted to the United States for a specific purpose and period of time, including tourists, diplomats, students, temporary workers, and exchange visitors, among others. For more information, see CRS Report R45040, Immigration: Nonimmigrant (Temporary) Admissions to the United States.

<sup>4</sup> Lawful permanent residents (LPRs) are foreign nationals lawfully admitted to the United States to live permanently. For more information, see CRS Report R42866, Permanent Legal Immigration to the United States: Policy Overview.

<sup>5</sup> In this report, data on nonimmigrant visa issuances come from the Department of State, which has published data for FY2020. Data on persons obtaining LPR status come from the Department of Homeland Security, which has not yet published FY2020 data; thus, LPR data in this report are for FY2019.

- a. Categories in which the number of LPR recipients exceeds the statutory annual numeric limit are largely due to timing differences between when LPR status is officially granted, and when immigrants actually arrive in the United States and are counted by DHS as green card recipients. These differences also result from the “roll-downs” of unused visa numbers from higher-priority categories. For more information, see Table 1 in CRS Report R42866, Permanent Legal Immigration to the United States: Policy Overview.
- b. The Immigration and Nationality Act provides 40,040 EB-3 immigrant visas each year. From FY2002 through FY2019, that annual ceiling was reduced by up to 5,000 each year to accommodate adjustments made under the Nicaraguan Adjustment and Central American Relief Act (NACARA, Title II of P.L. 105-100, as amended by P.L. 105-139, Section 1(e)). For FY2020, this reduction was limited to approximately 350, and for FY2021, this reduction will be limited to approximately 150.
- c. The Immigration and Nationality Act provides for 55,000 diversity immigrant visas each year. From FY1999 through FY2020, that annual ceiling was reduced by up to 5,000 each year to accommodate adjustments made under the Nicaraguan Adjustment and Central American Relief Act (NACARA, Title II of P.L. 105-100 as amended by P.L. 105-139, Section 1(e)). For FY2020, this reduction was limited to approximately 350, and for FY2021, this reduction will be limited to approximately 150.
